INTRODUCTION

Welcome to the Personal Wavelength online training!

This is the first class in the series of three classes which comprise the full Vibrational Testing and Healing series.

In this first class in the series, you will learn a powerful series of practices which are derived from the methods used by the French school of Physical Radiesthesia in the early 1900's. These methods are themselves a modern form of Vibrational Science related to previously secret and hidden methods taught in closed Initiation schools of the past, including the Ancient Egyptian Temple Science.

The information and techniques in this course have been clarified and simplified from their often unclear presentation in the written works of the French School. We have broken each practice down step-by-step to make them easier to learn, and have provided many additional details to help you understand exactly when and how to apply these practices.

We have also added many new supporting practices which will help you overcome common challenges students have in learning these methods. These will also help you to perceive and interact with the invisible world of Vibration which surrounds us.

This Vibrational Testing and Healing series provides the foundation for all of the Vibrational Healing Science trainings offered by the Vesica Institute; this series is where we give you the keys to be able to detect and apply the complete range of invisible vibrations which create and sustain all life in the physical world. Further trainings focus specifically on practical applications of the vibrations from Crystals, Plants, Essential Oils, etc.

The work of the Vesica Institute is based on two essential areas of Holistic Health: Spiritual Science and Vibrational Healing Science. You will find that the practices you learn in the Vibrational classes support in many ways the information and practices contained in the Spiritual Science courses. For example, the practices with the Chakras and Central Column contained in this Personal Wavelength training allow you to directly test the energetic condition -- and level of Activation -- of these important energy centers which we access in the Spiritual Science practices.

Thank you for joining us for these trainings. It is your support which allows us to conduct our research, and to offer practical trainings in these important areas of Holistic Health and Self-Development.

Many Thanks,
Robert J. Gilbert Ph.D.

DISCLAIMER

The Vibrational paradigm which this series is based on is common to all traditional healing systems around the world. They describe the existence of a Life Force (Chi, Ki, Prana, Ether, etc.) which is what animates and determines the condition of all living beings. This Life Force is a vital energy which is itself part of an invisible spiritual and vibrational world which surrounds us and affects every aspect of the world around us.

However Modern Science and Medicine, especially in the Western world today, completely dismisses all classical concepts of Vital Energy and Life Force. It focuses only on physical, mechanical references.

This class provides access to historical methods of holistic testing and energy balancing which are based on concepts of Vital Energy. Accordingly, nothing in this class will be considered as valid by the standards of modern reductionist Science or Medicine, nor do we make any claims related to their concepts of “health care” or in any way seek their approval or support.

This class is for the millions of people interested in their own holistic exploration of dynamic energy and vibration, outside of the boundaries set by reductionist science and medicine.

ALL METHODS IN THIS CLASS ARE FOR YOUR PERSONAL EXPLORATION ONLY.

METHODS GIVEN IN THIS TRAINING REFLECT HISTORICAL USAGE, BASED ON TRADITIONAL CONCEPTS WHICH ARE ENTIRELY DIFFERENT FROM THOSE ACCEPTED BY MODERN WESTERN SCIENCE AND MEDICINE.

USER ASSUMES ALL RESPONSIBILITY FOR THEIR EXPLORATION OF THESE METHODS AND CONCEPTS.

NEITHER DR. ROBERT J. GILBERT NOR ANY EMPLOYEE OF THE VESICA INSTITUTE ARE LICENSED MEDICAL DOCTORS.

WE DO NOT DIAGNOSE NOR TREAT ANY ILLNESS, NOR DO THE HISTORICAL METHODS DESCRIBED IN OUR COURSES ALLOW YOU TO DIAGNOSE OR TREAT ANY ILLNESS.

WE MAKE NO CLAIMS WHATSOEVER FOR ANY MEDICAL USES OF THE INFORMATION HEREIN.

NEVER INTERFERE WITH THE MEDICAL CARE BEING PROVIDED TO ANY PERSON. Always follow the advice of the health care professional you trust, and never put yourself or another person in any danger!

I hope this training will help to preserve -- and to spread -- the knowledge and techniques of this great tradition. The methods provided in this course can help to ease suffering in the world, so please find ways to use them to help yourself and others. Remember that these methods can also help to awaken your direct perception of the Invisible World of Spirit and Vibration, creating a major step forward in your own core spiritual development.

I. BACKGROUND TO THE PERSONAL WAVELENGTH METHOD

A) The Ancient Egyptian Temple Science

The French Radiesthesiasts cited Ancient Egypt more often than any other culture as the historical roots of advanced vibrational science. From earlier roots: Plato describes in Timaeus and in Critias the information given by the Egyptian Priests to Greeks about the earlier civilizations which gave rise to the Ancient Egyptian period. The term “Atlantis” is derived from these two texts, being the term Plato asserts that the Egyptian Priests used to describe the earlier empire.

Initiates into the Spiritual and Vibrational Sciences were known as the “Masters of the Net”. The “Net” is the flexible matrix of creation, which today we describe as the matrix of Space-Time. This was often shown in symbolic form as a physical Net, as shown here in the hands of Initiates. The Masters of the Net knew how to work with the invisible vibrational world which forms a Net, a Matrix, which determines the appearance and functions of everything in the manifest world.

Huge numbers of the ancient Egyptian form of Pendulum -- properly termed a “Wadj”, and simply called the “Egyptian Pendulum” by the French Radiesthesiasts -- have been found in archeological digs across Egypt. These can be seen in Museums across the Middle East and Europe, where they are simply described as being “Ritual Objects.” As we will describe in more detail in the next class in this series (The Universal Vibrational Spectrum) this is a very sensitive pendulum based on its emission of a penetrating carrier wave from its tip; French researchers would later name this carrier wave the “Negative Green” ray. The large number of these found in digs demonstrate the use of Vibrational Testing (which the French would later call Radiesthesia) across Egypt.

In the Personal Wavelength method which you will learn in this class, we tune the pendulum string like an antenna to a precise length which resonates with a particular vibration.

On the temple walls of Egypt we see representations of the “Stretching of the Cord”, an important practice in Ancient Egypt.

In the picture above from the Temple of Karnak, Djehuti (known to the Greeks as Thoth) -- the initiator of the Egyptian Spiritual and Vibrational Sciences -- is shown stretching the cord.

We should remember that the illustrations on the Egyptian Temple Walls were part of the training of the Initiates within those locations, they were not seen by the general public: the Temple were places of closed Initiation training, they were not open to the public like a church is today.

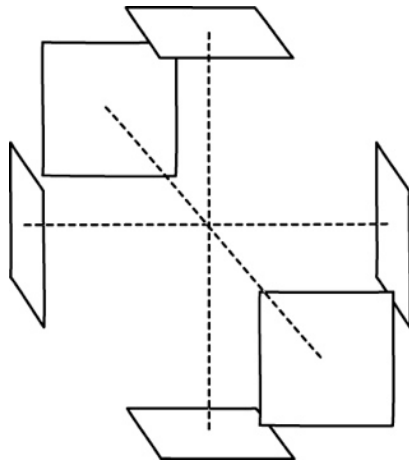

The Stretching of the Cord is related to a key mystery of creation: how the non-material Spiritual Beings and Vibrational Forces give rise to the physical world. A Point in space is a Center, which has no spatial extension is thus Zero Dimensional.

When the hands “Stretch the Cord” out in a single line in space, that creates the first dimension of Physical space: Length.

When extended out in line in a 90 degree axis from the first line, this creates the second dimension of physical space: Width.

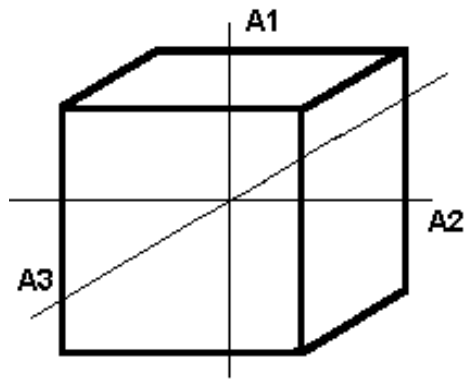

And when extended out in a line at a 90 degree axis from the first two lines, that vertical line creates the third axis of physical space: Depth.

The Stretching of the Cord is the Creation of the Manifest World, through Spirit moving into Spatial Dimensions.

This is a key concept in our Vesica Sacred Geometry trainings. The three axes -- which literally define the physical world into which we incarnate -- create a 3-D cross; when each arm of that 3-D cross is sealed off with a wall, it creates a Cube. This is the “Black Cube of Space” in Sacred Geometry.

The Mystery of the Black Cube of Space is the creation of a Physical World which will act as a sealed alchemical retort for a young group of Spiritual Beings to undergo their education and Initiation.

From this great principle of how Spirit manifests the physical world -- and everything inside of it -- through creating the Dimensions of Space, we come to the secret of the different vibrational qualities of each increment of length.

In Modern Science, this principle manifests quantitatively with the use of physical antennas to capture (resonate with) specific wavelengths. Each wavelength has its own specific functions; longer waves are used to create our AC home electrical power systems, shorter ones to create radio waves or other forms of wireless communication, still shorter ones for imaging the inside of physical objects (X-Rays), etc.

Basic Antenna - Whip

Our tuning of the string length of our Pendulum is similar to the scientific use of antennas, only our work goes far beyond the purely quantitative adjustment of physical antennas to capture just electro-magnetic waves.

The ancient Egyptian Wadj Pendulum, and the “Stretching of the Cord” ritual are the sacred antecedents in the Egyptian Temple Science for the Personal Wavelength method you will learn to use in this training.

You too will “Stretch the Cord”, learning to tune the length of the cord of the pendulum to any vibration in the Universe.

Whip Antenna

Your practice of this method will be immeasurably enriched, if you allow yourself to develop a deep sense of wonder and appreciation for being able to resonate with every vibration within all of creation.

You can truly experience the “Harmony of the Spheres” as you move through each different cord length in tuning your pendulum.

B) The Jesuit Order in Europe

The Knowledge from the Ancient Egyptian Temple Science went in a variety of directions. It went to the Greeks, as shown by the dialogues recorded in the works of Plato and in the works of the Pythagorean school in general. It went into the Jewish Kabbalah, connected to the Egyptian Temple teachings received by Moses. It went into a variety of traditions, both external and hidden, in the Middle East. And in time it was cultivated by European esotericists within the Jesuit order of the Catholic church, who collected spiritual knowledge from Egypt and from all over the world.

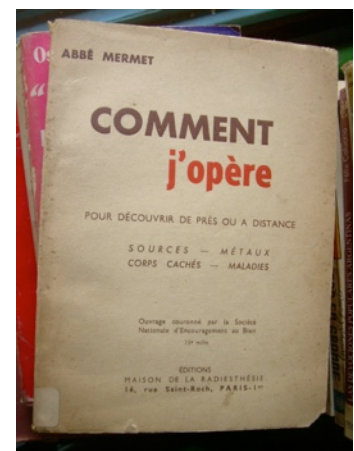

Within the Jesuit order there was the hidden cultivation of practical Vibrational Testing, the roots of what would later become French Radiesthesia.

In the early 1900's the story of the Jesuit training in Radiesthesia became public in France with the publication of texts such as "The Radiesthesia of the Missionaries", which described how Catholic Missionaries would be trained by the Jesuits to be able to survive and thrive in the distant lands they were sent to on their Missions.

With Radiesthesia, the Missionary could find sources of drinkable water, and could tell drinkable water deposits apart from toxic water. They could find edible foods and avoid poisonous plants. They could find what plants had healing properties to cure specific illnesses. These skills not only allowed them to survive, they also allowed the Missionaries to make themselves useful to the local people, and to show the power of their Religion in practical ways.

Jesuit-trained French speaking Priests in France and Switzerland began to publish articles and books about their own methods of Radiesthesia, allowing the general public to learn and practice these methods for the first time. Some French texts mention that Abbe Ferran was the one who revealed and popularized the "Personal Wavelength" method to the public.

The most famous of the French Priests who wrote public texts on how to practice Radiesthesia was Abbe Mermet (shown here). He revealed his methods in the book "Comment j'opère" (How I Operate) which was published in English as Principles and Practice of Radiesthesia.

C) The French School of Physical Radiesthesia

Once the French Priests had revealed their methods, the general public in France could start experimenting with their methods. This gave rise to the great movement of Physical Radiesthesia in France, which fully blossomed in the 1930's.

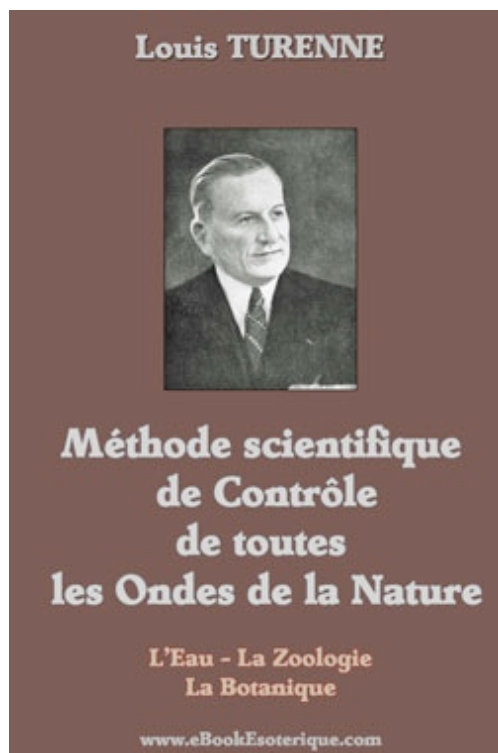

The term "Physical Radiesthesia" became the general term to describe the Vibrational methods created in France at that time. Radiesthesia is a term which means sensitivity to (or detection of) subtle Radiations. Many French researchers considered their work to be a natural and needed extension of modern Physics to detect radiations which the crude equipment of modern science was unable to identify.

French Radiesthesiasts also referenced the Ancient Egyptian vibrational science as the most advanced classical system which understood these invisible vibrations. This was prominent in the important works of de Belizal; the ancient Egyptian Wadj Pendulum (called by the French the "Egyptian Pendulum") was featured on the cover of his second book Micro-Vibrational Physics and Invisible Forces shown to the left.

The term "Physical Radiesthesia" was also used to differentiate this method of working with pendulums from the "Mental" or "Psychic" Radiesthesia which asked mental questions and programmed the pendulum or rod to move in a particular manner (often to indicate a 'yes' or 'no' answer.) Physical Radiesthesia asks no mental questions, it uses principles of resonance between materials and/or shapes to indicate the presence or absence of specific energy qualities.

Physical Radiesthesia is much more technical than Mental Radiesthesia, and has far deeper insights into qualities of energy and their effects than does Mental Radiesthesia.

Scientists such Louis Turenne -- an Engineer and Professor of Radio Wave technology -- began to use these techniques to explore the invisible vibrational world around us. Turenne as a Radio Engineer knew that we are surrounded by invisible waves, that we will never know exist if we don't have an instrument to detect them. We may have radio waves all around us and even passing through us, but without an antenna connected to a radio you have no idea anything is there.

Turenne knew that our current technology was very primitive and only captured the most gross aspects of subtle energies around us. He developed methods to test the more subtle vibrations which are around us, and which affect all living beings.

We will describe the Vibrational discoveries of the French Radiesthesiasts further in the next class in this series, the Universal Vibrational Spectrum.

Why did the French school of Physical Radiesthesia decline?

There are multiple reasons for its decline:

1. The Second World War created tremendous disruption to all activities in France and Europe from 1939 to 1945, with attention going to rebuilding when the war ended.
2. The discoveries of the French researchers were discussed in texts only available in French; these texts were often published in very limited numbers and could be hard to find.
3. Different researchers used different concepts, vibrational testing systems, and tools, making it difficult to synthesize their discoveries together.
4. Key information on the design and uses of the testing tools were often left out of the publications, either by oversight or intentionally.
5. Vibrational Radiesthesia is a technical field, which requires a coherent, progressive training to master. Such progressive training could be hard to find, and many people had only fragmentary knowledge.
6. There was also the danger that if one was experimenting with highly detrimental vibrations and was not careful, one could be harmed by them as was the case with the prominent researcher Leon Chaumery, which we will discuss in the next class.

Mental Dowsing became dominant, because it was very simple and did not require any technical knowledge and relatively little training.

Here at the start of our training, let's give a little more context to the difference between Mental Dowsing, and what we will call "Vibrational Radiesthesia." The French often called their work "Physical Radiesthesia", because it was not mental, and also they considered it to be an extension of Physics into subtle energies electro-magnetic meters could not detect. Another term (used by key researchers Chaumery and de Belizal) was "Vibrational Radiesthesia."

However we find that today the term "Physical Radiesthesia" tends to be confusing for people, because in reality the field deals with the detection of subtle radiations from a source, and not testing the physical body itself. Today we use the term "Vibrational Medicine" and "Vibrational Healing" for a wide range of energy-based practices. Accordingly, we will use the term "Vibrational Radiesthesia" to describe these methods throughout the majority of the rest of this series.

In reality, both Mental Dowsing and Vibrational Radiesthesia are two different levels of Initiation, although they are rarely presented this way today.

In the most popular form of modern Mental Dowsing, a person is trained to "program" a pendulum or rod to respond a certain way to a question the person asks; commonly, the pendulum will be programmed to move in one direction for a "yes" response and another direction for a "no" response.

When done correctly, this is really an opening of our mind to tap into the Universal Information Field. This is what mental dowsing does when it asks mental questions and the pendulum is programmed to respond with a yes or no answer. The challenge is that this requires significant clearing of the mind and tuning into a higher level of consciousness than our usual intellectual mind. If mental dowsers ask questions with their mind not sufficiently cleared and attuned, they will end up simply dowsing their own projected thought-forms and not the actual transcendental Universal Information field.

At its highest level, Mental Dowsing becomes an opening of our mental body to the Universal Information Field; however this requires significant development of the mind and of higher consciousness to achieve its full potential.

However Mental Dowsing cannot do Vibrational Radiesthesia does; they are two different independent skills.

Vibrational Radiesthesia is different from Mental Dowsing for a variety of reasons including:

- * It can directly detect the invisible vibrations coming from any person, place, or thing.
- * It can differentiate the vibrations from each other, to know the exact quality and functions of each separate vibration.

- * It can test the vibrations within any part of a living body, and how any substance or vibration is affecting the energy of a living being at any scale (whether the micro-scale of DNA, or moving up the size of a cell, an organ, an energy center or energy meridian, the entire body, any level of the energy field in or around the body, etc.)
- * It can tell the exact Quality of energy, and distinguish highly toxic vibrations from beneficial ones; Mental dowsing typically only tests the size of an energy field, and not the quality of energy therein (not being based on vibrational science, it has no frame of reference for vibrational qualities, much less any effective methods for testing them.)
- * Vibrational radiesthesia develops the human subtle bodies in a completely different way than mental dowsing. Vibrational radiesthesia develops a new organ of perception in the human subtle body, to be able to perceive the invisible vibrational world all around us.

Vibrational Dowsing, when done correctly, is really the opening of our own Vibrational Energy Field (Chi, Ki, Prana, Ether) to perceive the invisible Ocean of Vibrations (called the Universal Chi Field in China). Vibrational Radiesthesia opens up new spiritual organs of perception in our Life Energy field, an aspect of what Rudolf Steiner termed the “New Etheric Clairvoyance.”

Today, unfortunately almost all “Dowsing” classes are based on Mental methods and Vibrational methods are very little known. It is thanks to the work of Dr. Ibrahim Karim and his BioGeometry® system that more people in the modern day have been exposed to French Physical Radiesthesia, as well as his own important new contributions to Vibrational Science.

By the end of this series, you will have learned a solid set of practical skills in Vibrational Radiesthesia, both for vibrational testing and for holistic health applications.

II. BASIC TERMINOLOGY AND PRINCIPLES

A) Basic Terms

1. Neutral Pendulum: A Pendulum which has no particular vibrational broadcast or quality of its own. This means the pendulum usually is not made of particular gemstones, does not have specific shapes in the design etc. The French Radiesthesiasts would take a sphere of wood and cut it in half, then give the lower hemisphere a half turn (180 degrees) and then glue it back to the top half; this neutralized the natural polarities on the two ends of the Pendulum.

We can use a simple plastic spherical pendulum as a neutral pendulum in this training.

2. Mental Dowsing / Psychic Radiesthesia: The most common form of Dowsing currently found in North America and Europe. Mental Dowsing refers to methods of dowsing with pendulums and other tools which rely on asking mental questions, and on “programming” a tool with our mind in order to make the pendulum move a particular way in response to the mental question (either indicating a yes or no answer, or moving to show the location of an energy line or field.)

Mental dowsing can be a powerful method, however it is an entirely different technique than Physical Radiesthesia. It is common for students of Physical Radiesthesia to corrupt their testing by the intrusion of their mind into the process; this basically creates a thought-form which the person dowses rather than testing the actual energy field which is present. For mental dowsing, the form of the pendulum is relatively unimportant, as the actual energetic field is often not engaged with; the mind is the agent, not the vibrational field.

3. Physical Radiesthesia / Vibrational Radiesthesia or Dowsing: Method of Dowsing with Pendulums and other tools which makes a direct connection between a person’s energy field and an external energy field, through the medium of the pendulum or other dowsing tool. This is the classical form of Radiesthesia which was likely taught in multiple spiritual traditions in the past, and in modern times was popularized primarily by French Researchers in the early 1900’s. Today a leading proponent and innovator in Physical Radiesthesia is Dr. Ibrahim Karim, founder of BioGeometry®. There are no mental questions asked, nor mental programming of pendulum movements, in Physical Radiesthesia to ensure that the actual vibrational information is being accurately analyzed and not corrupted by projection of thought-forms by the Radiesthesiast. Physical Radiesthesia is more technical than Mental Dowsing, and gives precise information on which Vibrational Qualities are present or absent, or the energetic effects of a vibrational source on a living being.

The Physical Radiesthesia pendulum is calibrated for one specific vibrational quality, through either:

- a) Shapes built into the Pendulum, and/or
- b) Materials built into the Pendulum or connected with it, and/or
- c) Adjusting the string length (calibration) to “tune into” a specific vibrational quality.

When there is resonance between the vibration the Vibrational Radiesthesia Pendulum is tuned to and the energy field being tested, there is a “Pull” on the pendulum, which creates a rotation of the pendulum either clockwise or counterclockwise. The meaning of clockwise vs. counterclockwise rotation can change based on how the pendulum was calibrated; in many cases the different directions of rotation indicate different polarities being detected, which are not good or bad in themselves.

In other cases such as with “Personal Wavelength” testing, the pendulum is calibrated to go Clockwise at a particular string length which is resonant with a particular energy field; in this case when the pendulum goes counter-clockwise, it indicates a disruption of the natural resonance of that energy field.

4. Calibration: The act of adjusting the string length on a pendulum (usually a Neutral Pendulum) so that it “tunes into” a specific energy quality.

5. Witness: A Witness is a sample which has the vibrational information from a particular person (or from another energetic system such as an animal, plant, chemical, mineral, etc.)

This can be used for distant testing and energetic applications, which will work the same as if the person we are testing were present in the room with us.

B) The 3 Types of Witnesses

In Vibrational Radiesthesia, we prefer to use Natural Vibrational Witnesses, and will use Imprinted Vibrational Witnesses when no Natural witness is available.

However we do NOT use the “Witness by Mental Association” which is commonly used in Mental Dowsing today.

Here is a complete explanation of each kind of Witness.

1. Natural Vibrational Witness: an actual sample of the person’s vibrational field, which could be any of the following:

- * Photograph of them
- * Hair sample
- * Blood sample
- * Saliva Sample
- * Clothing they have worn (not washed since they wore it - has samples of skin oil, perspiration, etc. on the clothing which carries their vibrational field information)
- * Their Signature (written in their own hand, not by another person)
- * Paper Witness (a small square of white unlined paper, which the person rubs on their forehead and nose to get some skin oil and cells on the paper, then signs the square; the signature reinforces their vibration, and also reminds you whose witness this is!)

TIP: Photographs are commonly used as Vibrational Witnesses. The type of photographs which have the richest vibrational information are those made with classic photo developing techniques, because they have silver in the chemical formula which holds the vibrations extremely well. However any type of photograph can work, including pictures off the internet or a digital file, printed out with a conventional inkjet or laser printer, either in black and white or in color.

It is best if the photograph has only the person in it, no other person or animal in the picture. If the photo has multiple people in it, then you can cut the other people out and use only the portion of the photo with that person in it. If you don’t want to cut the photo, then get graph paper (paper covered with little drawn squares) and use it to cover up all the other people or animals in the picture except the person you are testing (graph paper can block radiesthesia vibrations, as discussed later regarding the proper use and storage of Vibrational Witnesses).

2. Imprinted Vibrational Witness: this is an imprint (made by the power of a person’s mind, which has tuned into a person and created Resonance with their energy field) of a person’s energy field quality onto a surface where it can be tested (the surface is usually just a piece of clean white paper).

This witness may be created by the Mind, however the key thing is that it is an imprint of the person's VIBRATIONAL energy field. This means that it has the exact same energy quality as a Vibration Witness (described in '1' above) has.

To be sure we have properly captured a person's vibrational field onto a surface to make a "Imprinted Vibrational Witness", we need to practice that skill (just as we need to practice any energetic skill.)

See the following section on creating and testing Imprinted Vibrational Witnesses.

3. Witness by "Mental Association": this is a mental dowsing technique, not used in Vibrational Radiesthesia. In this method, a person's written name is often used for the Dowser to "mentally associate" the person to; however this written name is not tested to see if it is actually functioning as a Vibrational Witness (which would mean the witness has the actual vibrational field information of the person present on it) and in many cases it does not have actual Vibrational Field information.

This technique can work, but is not used in BioGeometry® (which is a Vibrational Radiesthesia method). Success or failure of this technique relies on the clarity and power of a person's mental focus to connect to the person through their written name; it is sometimes happens that mental dowsers think the technique is working accurately, when in reality they are only dowsing their own thought-forms about a person and not the actual energetic field of the person. There are usually no tests used in Mental Dowsing to evaluate whether an actual connection has been made to the person, it is assumed that it is effective (few modern mental dowsers are aware of Vibrational methods of testing and confirming vibrational field resonance).

Note that this technique is usually based on writing a person's name and then doing mental dowsing (asking mental questions and getting programmed pendulum responses as answers) about them. The person's name is written by someone other than the person being tested, which means their written name does NOT intrinsically carry a link to their full vibrational field information, that link must be created by the power and focus of a dowser's consciousness. If the person's name was written by the person them-self, ie is a Signature, then it IS a Vibrational Witness and has an intrinsic link to their vibrational field.

Functions:

a) Detect Polarity (calibrate string length to poles of a battery; maximum CW for positive pole and maximum CCW for negative pole.)

b) Detect Strengthening or Weakening Effect of anything on the general energy field of a particular person or other living being (calibrate string length to maximum Clockwise Rotation over a person's witness, ie string length which resonates with their core energy quality; then test the sample in relation to the witness.)

c) Detect Balance or Imbalance in any sub-system of the larger energy system the pendulum is calibrated for. Example: Once Pendulum is calibrated for the resonant string length of a particular person (see (b) above), then it can be used at that string length to test any organ in that person's body. Imbalance will be shown by slowing of rate of Clockwise rotation, or going Counter-Clockwise.

d) Detect the Resonant Length which identifies any energy system (a color, sound, mineral, Earth line, etc.) Can be used to identify hidden linkages between the same energy quality manifesting in different scales (for example, a color and a sound may be found to have the same resonant length on the string.) To put this another way, we can calibrate the string length of the neutral pendulum over a sample of a particular energy quality, then test other things using that string length to see if there is a resonance (ie, if there is a pull on the pendulum when testing using the calibrated string length for that energy quality.)

e) Detect the Presence or Absence of any Energy Quality, by connecting the neutral pendulum to a vibrational witness for that energy quality. This can be done by either:

* Holding the witness in the non-dowsing hand, and connecting the witness energetically to the neutral pendulum which will then "feel the pull" if put into search position over anything containing the same energy quality as the witness held in the other hand. For instance holding a piece of Gold in one hand while the other hand holds a neutral pendulum over an area of ground, or a mass of stone, to see if Gold is contained therein.

* Connecting a vibrational sample directly to the neutral pendulum, so that it can be used to test for the energy quality held in that sample. This was done by French Radiesthiasts such as Abbe Mermet, through using spherical neutral pendulum which had holes drilled into them to hold vibrational samples, which were then secured in place with a screw top (these are referred to usually as “Chamber” or “Witness” pendulums.)

Common Mistake: String Length must be calibrated to each thing tested for. A common Mistake is to transfer correct string length for one phenomenon (example: positive or negative polarity, calibrated on a battery) to a completely different phenomenon (example: strengthening or weakening effect of a sample on a person’s Personal Wavelength, calibrated on a person’s energy field). You can only test for what you have calibrated for!

D) Essential Keys To Skill Development

A few essential keys to developing high level skills in Energy Quality Testing:

1. Feel the pendulum as an extension of our own energy field. FEEL the pendulum's interaction with the energy field being tested, DON'T "THINK ABOUT" this interaction from the outside.
2. DON'T try to control the pendulum, or "program" it with the mind. The pendulum is constructed to resonate with a specific vibrational quality through it's design; it may contain specific Shapes, Angles, Lengths, or Materials which create Resonance with whatever Vibration, Substance, or Being is to be detected. Also a simple "Neutral" Pendulum (without strong innate Vibrational Qualities of its own) can be tuned to detect a specific Vibration, Substance, or Being through "calibrating" the string to a specific length (essentially a wavelength) which resonates with the quality being tested.
3. The Pendulum is energetically connected to whatever is being tested, to see if it has the specific vibration which the Pendulum is tuned for. Usually the Pendulum is moved into a back and forth "Search Position" over the thing being tested. If the Pendulum detects the energy quality it is tuned to, then you will feel a PULL on the Pendulum, pulling it into a clockwise or counterclockwise spin. If the Pendulum does not detect the energy quality it is tuned to, then the pendulum continues in Search Position, no pull is felt.
4. Stay focused on the PROCESS of learning to use the pendulum, by feeling the connection between the quality of energy the pendulum is tuned to and an energy field you are testing which has that quality of energy within it. Do NOT focus on the OUTCOME of the testing, let that reveal itself naturally. If you expect the pendulum to do a certain thing, and are just focused on the outcome, you can easily corrupt the reading on the pendulum and make it follow your expectation. Stay with the Process!
5. Keep the mind clear of thoughts, ie cut out the "monkey mind chatter". Silence the mind so that you are not thinking in words, you simply have clear attention on the feeling of the pendulum connecting to the energy field being tested. If you can keep your attention calmly focused on the energy field being tested, without being distracted by other thoughts, you testing will usually be far more accurate and sensitive.
6. Test known things first.
7. Get variable responses.

E) The Entrainment Process: Prerequisite to Accurate Testing

In this training you will learn Vibrational testing skills in a modular format: this means that one simple new principle and technique is taught at a time, until a full range of testing skills has been fully integrated.

Test simple things with full focus for an extended period, to entrain your energy system to that vibration, how it feels. Pay attention to body signals for different energies; importance of visceral connection.

1. Practices to open up the Energy Pathway of the Body for that method, and to Entrain our energy system to recognize specific energy qualities. These are very fundamental practices, which provide the foundation for true mastery. Don't make the common mistake of not practicing the foundation techniques, wanting to move on to more interesting later techniques. Only regular, focused practice of the foundation techniques can lead to true mastery.

If you do each basic practice every day this week, you will quickly begin to notice how much stronger and more grounded your skills become. They can all easily be done in an hour or less each day.

2. Practices to apply the method for practical applications. These will be fairly simple and straightforward at this stage, then become more advanced starting with our next online class (Class 2 in this course).

We are going to focus first on your developing skill in accurate testing of the energy system, to find the areas which are blocked or out of balance.

The key mistake made by many people learning vibrational testing is that they do not spend enough time and attention developing strong testing abilities. This is usually because they are impatient, and wanting to jump ahead to corrections of the problem area they find.

What needs to be kept in mind during your initial training period is that accurate testing abilities are absolutely essential. It is very common today that people apply energetic corrections, and due to their lack of accurate testing skills they assume the correction they made is fully effective and sufficient.

Only accurate testing abilities can show you exactly which correction is the most essential and effective, and reveal to you when problems are still present despite your corrections.

Don't assume your testing is accurate until after you have done quite a bit of practice of the most core techniques, over an extended period of time.

Stay Humble: watch for a subconscious pridefulness, which assumes every correction you make is perfectly effective. This issue of pridefulness, and making assumptions without sufficient testing, sadly affects many people who work with vibrational healing methods today. Don't be one of them, or you will bear the karma of having left a person with a problem that you assumed you had corrected, but in reality is still festering and may lead to the further suffering of the person at a later time.

No remedy is reliable without strong testing skills to correctly evaluate its effect.

Every hour you invest in developing strong testing skills, will pay much more dividends in the long run than if you jump too soon to focusing only the corrections -- and never develop testing skills which can be relied upon in a crisis.

III. PREPARATION FOR TESTING: CLEARING THE ENERGY CENTERS & CHANNELS

A) Before You Begin

Accurate Vibrational Testing requires that the energy in your own body and energy system be open and flowing, so that you can energetically connect with the dynamic, invisible vibrational world around you.

Before you begin:

Go to the bathroom, to empty your urinary bladder and the bowels as much as possible before you begin. This will help the energy flow, and reduce tension in the body.

Set up a bowl of Salt water next to you, so that you can direct into it any toxic energy you are purging from these practices. Do not overlook this step! It is very common that energy practitioners today simply release toxic energy from themselves or their clients into the space they are in, to contaminate the air or surfaces in the room; this is a major mistake and very poor energy hygiene. Always direct toxic energy into the Salt Water bowl, where the water will collect the energy and the Green Vibration of the Salt will help disintegrate it. (This Green Vibration of Salt will be discussed in more detail in the next class in this series, the Universal Vibrational Spectrum).

Drink a large glass of pure water. It is essential that you stay hydrated when doing energy practices; it is an important principle that water allows the energy to flow, whether it is in your body, in the Earth, within a stone, etc.

B) Clearing the Central Channel: Energy Flows of Heaven and Earth

Clearing and Activating the Central Column “Heaven and Earth” flows and the Protective Sphere “Torus” flow (Descending “Yang” and Ascending “Yin” currents of energy.)

The most fundamental and essential energy flow in (and outside) your body is the Central Column of Energy; this is the primary energy axis of your body. Column of Spirit introduced in our Essential Teachings and Practices of Spiritual Science with more advanced exercises taught in our other Spiritual Science classes (including Connecting with Spiritual Beings and Spiritual Empowerment.) The Heaven Flow is Yang (positive current in terms of polarity); it descends down the central column from high above your head, down into the head at the Crown Center and through the Central Axis of your body to exit at the Perineum and continue straight downward into the Earth (when standing, this energy flow goes between your legs). The Earth Flow is Yin (negative current in terms of polarity); it ascends from deep in the Earth to between your feet between your legs (when standing), rising into the Perineum and up the Central Column of your body to exit out the Crown and ascend up the higher column outside of your body.

Note 1: The exact midline of the Central Column through your body is the “Golden Thread”, which has extremely powerful and balanced energy. Anytime you are feeling unbalanced either energetically or psychologically, you can put your attention on the Golden Thread centerline running through the Central Column in your body; this is extremely balancing and centering.

Note 2 : Another important part of the Earth flow in addition to the Central Column flow, is the rising of Earth energy to enter your body at the base of your feet, and into your feet, entering in at the Kidney 1 “Bubbling Spring” point and ascending upwards through the body.

C) Creating the Dynamic Sphere of Protective Energy: Torus Exercise

This exercise creates a Toroidal energy flow around the body. A Torus is a geometric form that is essentially a Sphere that opens at the top and bottom so that a tube runs through the center of the Sphere: this allows a dynamic energy movement that runs through the center and then around the entire Sphere, making it a powerful energy circulation form instead of a more static energy containment form. The Torus is found throughout natural systems: from the molecular level, to the structure of an apple or a magnet, to the circulation of the human energy field, and all the way up in scale to the energetic field around planets and even larger celestial objects.

More detail on the Torus energy flow is taught in the Vesica Sacred Geometry Foundation Training (arriving online in 2016). It is also featured in some of our Spiritual Science trainings, where we find that this flow can go either up the central column (Earth / Yin Energy) and then to a point above the head and then out around the body, or it can go the opposite direction and go down the central column (Heaven / Yang Energy) and then out around the body from a point below the feet, or run both directions at the same time (creating a “scalar” energy effect as the two energetic circulations pass through each other.)

For the purposes of this class, we will run the energy only up the Central column and then down around the sides, to create the protective Sphere of energy around your body.

See the demonstration in the Video for this class.

D) Clearing the Energy Meridians

After experiencing the ascending (Yin) and descending (Yang) flows through the primary energy axis of the Body - the Central Column - we experience these flows through the primary energy meridians of the Body. Hold your hands up over your head, so that your arms are raised. The Yin Earth energy rises up the inside of your legs, up the front of the body, and then up the arms to the fingertips. The Yang Heaven energy descends down the back of the arms, down the back, and down the outside of the legs.

Note: this is an accurate generalization, although there are other energy flows in the body which may be part of a different pattern.

The 12 basic meridians plus the front (Conception Vessel) and back channels (Governing Vessel), have specific directions of energy flow on areas of the body.

The simplified method below is based on my study of the natural flow patterns of the Meridians, along with analyzing many different Chi Kung systems for clearing the Meridians.

With each step, I note for you which specific Meridian (all 12 major meridians, plus the 2 important midline meridians) is affected by that step.

Once you have learned this practice, it is possible to perform the entire exercise in only a couple of minutes.

METHODS OF RAPID CLEARING OF THE MERIDIANS

Primary method is to tap with your fingertips, along the major energy flows of the meridians on the surface of the body.

For those who are physically or energetically fragile, or highly sensitive, there are two main alternatives:

1. Instead of tapping along the body with the fingertips, just lightly rub with the fingertips along the flow of the meridians.
2. Instead of tapping or rubbing lightly the meridian flow pattern with the fingertips, keep the fingers off the body and just point the fingertips toward the body. Project energy from the fingertips to the body, magnetically pulling the energy through the meridians.

BEFORE YOU BEGIN:

Touch the tip of your tongue to the roof of your mouth. This connects the Governing and Conception Vessels, and helps a major energy flow in the body.

STEP ONE: CLEARING INSIDE AND OUTSIDE OF THE ARMS TO THE FACE

Use the right hand fingers to tap from the upper chest down inner arm to fingertips (Lung, Heart, and Pericardium Meridians), then outside of arms to neck and face (clears Large Intestine, Small Intestine, Triple Warmer Meridians). When tapping the face on both sides, be sure to tap over the cheek to the outer edge of the eyebrows, then tap back to end just in front of the ears.

STEP TWO: CLEARING THE BELT MERIDIAN AND DOWN THE BACK OF THE LEGS

Tap with both hands at the front of the belly at the navel, moving your hands to tap out to around both sides (clears Belt Meridian -- not part of 12 primary meridians); when your hands reach the back opposite the navel, then tap down the back of both legs (clears Urinary Bladder Meridian) and around the sides of your foot to the toes. Bend over from the waist to tap down the legs, then straighten up again at the end.

STEP THREE: CLEARING THE SIDES OF THE LEGS

Tap down from the side of your hips down the outside of your legs, to along the outer edge of your feet to the toes (clears Gall Bladder Meridian). If your knees are healthy, squat down as you pat down the legs, keeping the spine as straight as possible; then rise up out of the squat to stand straight at the end of this step. If your knees are not healthy, just lean over from the waist to pat down the legs, then straighten up at the end.

STEP FOUR: CLEARING FROM THE FACE DOWN THE FRONT OF BODY AND LEGS

Tap down from base of eye down face, neck, down chest and over nipples, down in line beneath nipples over pelvis, down front of legs to the toes (clears Stomach Meridian.) If your knees are healthy, squat down as you pat down the legs, keeping the spine as straight as possible. If your knees are not healthy, just bend over from the waist to pat down the legs.

STEP FIVE: CLEARING UP THE INSIDE OF THE LEGS

Tap from the ends of the toes and toe nail beds, then along the inside of the foot to up the inside of the legs (clears Liver, Spleen, and Kidney Meridians) to the Perineum, standing straight at the end.

STEP SIX: CLEARING UP THE FRONT CENTERLINE OF BODY

Tap from Perineum straight up front centerline of body over genitals, abdomen, centerline of chest and throat up to center of lower lip (clears Conception Vessel.)

STEP SEVEN: CLEARING UP THE BACK CENTERLINE OF THE BODY TO DOWN THE FRONT OF THE HEAD

Tap from base of spine up spine (switch arm position from below to above at mid-spine) to up back of neck, up centerline of back of head to the top of your head, then down the front centerline of the head to the upper lip (clears Governing Vessel.)

STEP EIGHT: SHAKING THE ENTIRE BODY

Shake the body to help circulate the energy released by the practice, and to further open any blockages in your physical or energetic body. If you have been trained to sweep the energy field with energetic projections from your hands to clear toxic energies, do so now over your whole body and deposit the toxic energy into the salt water bowl. Wash your hands afterwards, or spray your hands with Ananda Spray or other Essential Oil Spray.

STEP NINE: COLLECT THE ENERGY IN YOUR LOWER ABDOMEN

Hold your Hands over your lower abdomen, palms flat on the area beneath the navel. Collect the energy loose in your body in the lower abdomen, which is the safest place to store energy within the human energy system. (In Chinese Medicine and Internal Alchemy, this is the Lower Dan Tien area.)

Note 1: The practice is done in its entirety and in this exact sequence, just one time. However, if you feel it would be helpful, you can do the entire sequence multiple times, not just once.

Note 2: If you have Ananda Spray or other type of Essential Oil mixture which is designed to be sprayed on the body to clear toxic energy, spray this now over the whole body.

Note 3: If you have been trained how to run the Microcosmic orbit through the Governing and Conception Vessels, do this now. If you don't know what this is, then end the practice here (you can find instructions on how to run the Microcosmic orbit from many different texts on Daoist Yoga, including Mantak Chia's Awaken Healing Energy Through the Tao).

STONE METHOD OF CLEARING THE ENERGY MERIDIANS

A very powerful and useful method of doing this clearing of the Meridians practice is to use the Rubbing technique with a Stone of the appropriate Vibrational quality, rather than just your hand.

Shape: The Optimal Shape is the “massage wand” shape, which is a cylinder shape which is rounded on both ends -- with one end coming to a more acutely angled rounded point than the other blunt end. The end with the more acute angle is always the end which primarily projects energy outward, so that is the end you want to rub along on the body (Note: in reality both ends project energy outward to some extent.) Use the acute angle tip directly on the meridian pathway if you are clearing a single pathway; if working on a larger area which covers multiple meridians (inside of arm, outside of arm, etc.) then use the side of the massage wand to cover the larger area.

If you do not have the stone in the form of a massage wand, then a basic rounded and polished Pebble / Palmstone can be rubbed along the body as an alternative.

Best Stones for this method:

We recommend using one of the Adaptogenic Stones, which have an especially profound overall balancing effect, in addition to their specific functions. Please see the articles on this topic on the www.vesica.org website, with much more information in the How to Use Crystals and Gemstones training.

My two top picks to use for the Clearing the Meridians are:

To clear detrimental energy from the meridians and balance the energy:

Indigo Gabbro, aka “Mystic Merlinite”, from Madagascar.

Or:

Iron Rose Quartz (aka Hematoid Rose Quartz). Either Red or Yellow (Golden Healer) type.

Note: Beware of Heated stones of this type which have flooded the market, which do not have the same beneficial vibrations as the natural stone; see our article about this stone on our Vesica website.

E) Clearing the 3 Key Areas in the Head

The ability to perceive subtle vibrational energies requires the activity of specific centers in the human head. If these centers are blocked, you will not accurately test vibrations around you (as well as there being other very serious energetic and psychological consequences of these blockages).

AREA 1: Third Eye Center and Forehead Centers. Most traditions only focus on the Third Eye Center at the root of the nose, between the eyebrows (the “Ajna” chakra of Indian Yoga), however there are other very important energy centers above this which are in the entire forehead; these higher forehead centers have a variety of names in different systems, including the “Joy Center”, Makara, Unicorn Center, etc.

AREA 2: Crown Center.

AREA 3: Back of the Head Centers. This covers from the “bump” on the back of the head (technically the “external occipital protuberance”) down to the location where the spine enters into the back of the skull (called the “Jade Pillow” in Daoist Yoga.)

Methods of Clearing:

- a) Hands-only method: Tapping gently on, or rubbing the centers. If you are trained in hands-on energy projection methods, you can project white or very light green light / vibration from your fingertips into the area, rotating the fingers counter-clockwise (as seen from in front of the area you are working on) to extract toxic energy -- which then should always be deposited in the salt water bowl. After the toxicity has been extracted, white light vibration can (if desired) be projected into the center from the fingers using a clockwise rotation in front of the center. Unless you have developed advanced skill in energy projections from the hands, please only do this energizing of head centers very gently and for a short time.
- b) Stone Method. The optimal stone to use for this is “Mystic Merlinite” (Indigo Gabbro) on each location in turn, instructed to pull and transmute the toxic energy from the location (it will do this when in contact with the energy center in any case, but it is important to have clear intent and to give precise directions to stones whenever using them.)

If no Indigo Gabbro is available, use another type of stone which can absorb toxic energy (Obsidian or Smoky Quartz are good examples) or which has the correct vibrations to clear the center. This will be discussed in more detail in the other classes in this training series.

For training in the use of different stones, see our training How to Use Crystals and Gemstones.

- c) Essential Oil Method. The optimal oil to use for this is “Sacred Frankincense”, which has strong Orange Vibration to purge the centers it is applied to of toxicity, as well as having Gold Vibration to activate the center (this is why Frankincense was used classically as a spiritual anointing oil). If no Sacred Frankincense is present, use regular Frankincense. Another alternative is Sandalwood essential oil which has strong Green vibration to disintegrate toxicity in the center. Simply rub these oils into the centers.

F) Clearing and Activating the Energy Flows to the Pendulum

In the Vibrational Testing Practices used in this series, you will be holding different pendulums which are designed to detect the presence or absence of a specific Vibration. The pendulum's cord will always be held between the thumb and forefinger of your dominant hand, allowing the pendulum to move freely suspended from the cord.

Accurate testing with the pendulum requires that energy be flowing through the two fingers holding the cord, into the pendulum itself; it is really YOUR energy that is doing the testing, and the pendulum is simply a TUNING DEVICE -- an antenna tuned to a specific vibration -- to allow your energy to tune into just one precise vibrational quality out of the universal ocean of vibration we are surrounded by at all times.

So this final method helps to open up the energy flows specifically to the two fingers which are holding the pendulum cord, to ensure the proper energy flow from your body into the pendulum itself.

The methods themselves are similar to those used at the beginning of the sequence taught earlier for clearing all the meridians, only now focused specifically on the Meridians which flow energy to the thumb and forefinger which hold the pendulum. Although you will only be holding the pendulum in one hand or the other (using whichever is your dominant hand, ie the one you write with, to hold the pendulum), we want to be sure to clear and activate the channels on both sides in order to keep harmony and balance in your energy system.

Refer to your Acupressure Laminated Chart if you would like to see visually where these Lung and Large Intestine Meridians are located.

THE FOUR-PART PRACTICE:

PART 1: TAPPING LEFT SIDE OF LUNG MERIDIAN TO THE THUMB

Tap with your right hand on your upper left chest. Tap from the upper left chest across your shoulder, continuing to tap down the inside of the left arm, over the palm and then over the thumb to the thumb tip. Then tap around the tip of the thumb to end by tapping directly on the nail bed at the back of the thumb.

PART 2: TAPPING LEFT SIDE OF LARGE INTESTINE MERIDIAN FROM THE INDEX FINGER

Tap with your right hand on the back of the fingertip of your left hand index finger, directly over the index finger's nail bed. Tap from the index finger tip down the back of the finger and back of the hand, then using your palm and fingers of your right hand to tap over both

PART 3: TAPPING RIGHT SIDE OF LUNG MERIDIAN

Tap with your left hand on your upper right chest. Tap from the upper right chest across your shoulder, continuing to tap down the inside of the right arm, over the palm and then over the thumb to the thumb tip. Then tap around the tip of the thumb to end by tapping directly on the nail bed at the back of the thumb.

PART 4: TAPPING RIGHT SIDE OF LARGE INTESTINE MERIDIAN

Tap with your left hand on the back of the fingertip of your right hand index finger, directly over the index finger's nail bed. Tap from the index finger tip down the back of the finger and back of the hand, then using your palm and fingers of your left hand to tap over both the back and top (thumb side) of your right arm. When you reach the shoulder, tap over the back of the right shoulder, then tap to the top of the right shoulder and up the right side of the neck. Tap up the right lower side of the face and then tap over the area between the upper lip and the base of the nose, ending at the left side of the base of the nose.

IMPORTANT NOTE: If you are pressed for time and cannot go through the preparatory practices given earlier in this section, then do at least this practice before beginning testing. This opens the direct energy flow going into the pendulum from your fingers.

G) Simple Clearing Method with Crystals

A very quick and simple method to help clear your energy field, is to hold specific clearing Crystals in each hand. The crystals can be in the form of Massage Wands (held like Rods in the hands) or polished Pebbles / Palmstones.

Best options for this are Indigo Gabbro / Mystic Merlinite (extracts toxicity and transmutes to beneficial qualities), or Iron Rose Quartz (energizes with some clearing effects also), or either Obsidian or Smoky Quartz (very effective for extracting vibrational toxicity out of the body and energy field, however these last two are not adaptogenic stones and do not have overall balancing effects - and require more thorough clearing after each use).

Remember to instruct (project a clear thought-form onto) the stone for what exactly you want it to do. The above stones will automatically perform the functions mentioned above when held in the hands even without instruction, but instruction can greatly increase the speed and power of their activity.

Always clean any stones that you use for clearing energy, after each use.

H) Simple Clearing Method with Essential Oil Spray

A simple method to clear your energy field at the surface level is to use a high quality blend of essential oils in a spray, over all the surface of the body. This requires using an essential oil spray, such as the Ananda Spray, which has been formulated and energized for the express purpose of clearing the human energy field by a person highly knowledgeable in the the vibrational effects of essential oils.

I) Clearing the Mind: Overcoming Mental Projections to Avoid Influencing the Testing

One of the most common problems in modern metaphysical testing and healing, is mistaking one's own projections of thoughts and energy for the true nature of what is being tested. This is why it is essential to keep the mind clear and free of the "Monkey Mind" chatter when doing any type of dowsing or Vibrational Testing. Our projected thought-forms can cover up, or distort, the actual energetic field of what we are testing so that we do not receive accurate information from our testing.

In most systems of spiritual training in traditions all over the world, meditative exercises are used to develop the ability to move beyond the ordinary intellectual level of thinking into higher consciousness states of pure awareness.

Practices to attain the Clear Mind state are especially emphasized in systems such as Zen Buddhism, Vipassana, and Transcendental Meditation.

This Clear Mind state is often likened to the surface of water; when completely still it is a pure mirror which reflects perfectly whatever is in front of it, but when disturbed then the image is distorted or completely obscured.

Another common metaphor for the Clear Mind state is a clear sky; when thoughts arise, they are like clouds in the sky. Don't fight against the thoughts, or engage with them in any way; just observe them with complete neutrality and let them pass by like clouds, until the sky is clear again.

The Transcendental Meditation system teaches to look for the gap between thoughts, and focus on that gap so that the time between thoughts becomes increasingly longer. In time the mind can be kept completely clear of thoughts, while being fully awake and aware.

Remember the Key Principle of "Energy follows Attention". Whatever you put your attention on, your energy will go to that thing. This means that you must focus your awareness on the thing you are testing, and keep the mind steady on the test subject without allowing your mind to wander.

To avoid testing your own energetic projections rather than the actual vibrational field of the target, your Mind should be kept clear of thoughts; both thoughts in the form of words and also thoughts in the form of mental images (unless the mental images are an accurate reflection of true nature of the target).

This practice will develop your ability to hold a calm, clear state of attention on the vibrational field you are testing, without your generating thought-forms which would distort your vibrational testing.

Step 1 of the practice below is taken from Vesica Spiritual Science: Essential Teachings and Practices Online Course, Class 1.

Step 2 is added for this class; it is a direct application of this Clear Mind state specifically for highly accurate vibrational testing, and for developing perception of the invisible vibrations around you.

STEP 1: CLEAR MIND STATE WITH EYES CLOSED

Observe your mind to be sure it is clear and neutral; catch yourself creating thought-forms.

DURATION OF PRACTICE:

Aim for 5 Minutes. Make it a shorter period, if it will help you make the time to actually do the practice and not put it off. Longer than 5 minutes is fine, but look out for the trap of planning you will do it for a longer period -- and then NOT doing the practice at all, because you “don’t have that much time today”.

GUIDELINES:

Let go of thoughts and set the intention to keep the mind clear. At first it is quite likely that, even though you don’t intend to generate any thoughts, the “Monkey Mind Chatter” will create all kinds of fleeting thoughts.

Just relax, and observe the Mind; don’t try to fight against, or in any way resist, the thoughts that arise. Simply go into a neutral observer consciousness; just observe when thoughts arise, don’t focus on them or try to “grasp” them, let them go and keep returning your attention to the quiet open space between the thoughts.

The time of the mind staying clear of random thoughts, through focusing on the gap between the thoughts, will increase significantly through regular practice of this very simple Exercise.

You may discover that this exercise is in fact deeply pleasurable. Quieting the constant mental chatter can feel like dropping a heavy burden. A feeling of clarity and lightness arises, which also has a quiet euphoric energy you may feel spreading through your energy body as you hold the Clear Mind state.

AT THE END OF THE PRACTICE: Let go of the intent to keep the mind clear of thoughts, but keep the eyes closed. Place your awareness on your energy field, and observe how this practice has affected the energy in and around the body, and your state of consciousness.

STEP 2: CLEAR MIND STATE WITH EYES OPEN, ATTENTION ON A VIBRATIONAL FIELD

This exercise is the same as given in Step 1, only you do the practice with the eyes open and with total attention on the energy field around an object. This practice is important because it:

- a) directs the power of the Clear Mind state specifically to Vibrational Testing.
- b) develops awareness of when your mind is truly clear, and when you are generating thought-forms that can corrupt your testing.
- c) extends the amount of time you can focus on the energy field of an object you are testing without getting distracted or losing focus.
- d) develops a deeper level of perception of energy fields in the world around you.

Start by doing the Step 1 Practice for a minute or two. When you have attained Clear Mind state, open your eyes and focus your attention on the vibrational field of an object in front of you. I recommend using a high quality stone or crystal as the object in front of you to focus your attention on, particularly one of the Adaptogenic Stones discussed on the Vesica Website because these have the most balanced energy; i.e. the stone will help to balance your energy field while you are focusing awareness on it.

Keeping your mind free of thoughts, hold your clear attention steady on the energy field around the stone. See how long you can hold the state of Clear Mind while focused on the energy field, with no extraneous thoughts entering your mind. Be aware when your mind starts to wander, when any thoughts arise; relax and let them float by and go back to the Clear Mind state focused on the energy field of the Stone. This will develop sensitivity to when you are generating thought-forms vs. when you are holding Clear Mind, as well as extending the amount of time you can hold this state.

If you practice this exercise daily for a few weeks, you will find that your ability to accurately test vibrational fields becomes much stronger. This exercise must be practiced daily for a period of time in order to entrain yourself to this Clear Mind state; it will then become a skill you can call up at will, taking no more than a few seconds to attain.

Get in the habit of always doing some basic exercises in clearing your energy field, and then attaining Clear Mind state, before you begin a session of vibrational testing. This will take just a few minutes, and will greatly improve your results!

IV. BEGINNING PRACTICES: POLARITY & COLOR

The two initial practices in this section are both related to the principle of finding Resonant Lengths, ie specific lengths of the pendulum string which resonate with a precise type of vibration. The string length acts like an antenna tuned to just one specific vibration, out of the invisible ocean of vibration we live within.

Having cleared your energy field and your mind, you are ready to begin testing.

Start the testing session with:

1. Touch the tip of your tongue to the roof of the mouth, and keeping it there when testing. This will help the energy to flow in your body.
2. Connect consciously to your heart energy, to soften your energy and help expand subtle perception. You can just put your attention on the warm energy of your heart, or you can touch your heart area with the pads of your fingertips to connect for a moment to this energy. Don't point the fingertips towards the heart when you touch the chest (because the fingertips project energy), just rest the pads of the fingers flat on your chest.

A) Detecting Polarity: Finding a Single Resonant Length

In this practice you will find just one specific Resonant Length: the one which detects (and differentiates) positive and negative Polarities.

NEEDED FOR THIS PRACTICE:

A common household battery with a cylindrical design: AAA, AA, C or D cell battery. The battery can be depleted of charge and still work for this practice. However if you have difficulty picking up energetic fields, it is recommended you use a fully charged D cell battery for this practice, as it has the largest field.

A Neutral Pendulum (Spherical; basic "vortex" / spiral shaped pendulums are also acceptable) with a long string.

A Pen or Pencil to test the polarities on in a later step of the practice.

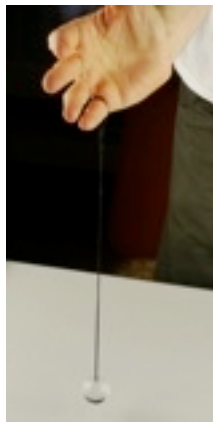

WHY DO WE START WITH THIS PRACTICE?

This is our first practice in learning Physical Radiesthesia, because

- a) It is extremely simple
- b) It teaches the fundamental methods of how to hold a pendulum
- c) It teaches fundamental methods of how to calibrate string length on a pendulum
- d) It demonstrates how opposite polarities can create opposite spin directions on a pendulum
- e) It teaches multiple stages of sensitivity in testing a subject, ranging from directly over it to simply directing our attention to it.

STEP 1 - FUNDAMENTAL METHOD FOR BEGINNING ALL PENDULUM TESTING

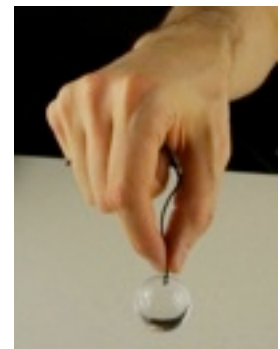

Here in our first Vibrational Testing practice, we introduce the essential first steps of all Vibrational Radiesthesia pendulum testing. These steps apply not only to the Polarity testing we are about to do, they also apply to all other tests we will do with different pendulums (and to detect different vibrations) in this series of trainings.

1a) Tie a loop at the end of the pendulum string. Put this loop over the little finger of the hand you are going to hold the pendulum in (this should be whichever hand you write with normally, as that is the hand you tend to have the most sensitivity in using). If the pendulum should swing out of your grasp, the loop will keep it connected to your hand. The loop on the little finger also prevents the end of the string hanging out of your hand, creating a “secondary antenna” that could confuse your finding the right string length to hold the pendulum at in order to detect polarity.

1b) Coil the loose string into the palm of your hand, and hold the string right next to where it is connected to the pendulum itself. Hold the string between the index finger and thumb, with these two fingers lightly touching the pendulum itself. This keeps the string from getting in your way, and also will allow you to easily control the string length as you slowly let out the string through your fingertips in the next step.

1c) Swing the Pendulum straight back and forth, ie swinging in front of you and back straight towards you. Do not let the pendulum rotate to either side, just a straight back and forth movement. Slowly let the string slide through your fingertips, gradually and in a controlled manner letting the string length increase bit by bit, until you come to the end of the string (as much as you can let out with it still tied to your pinky finger.)

This is called the SEARCH POSITION; a straight back and forth movement of the pendulum over the item being tested.

1d) Then start the practice over again, coiling the cord back in your palm and letting the string length slowly increase again as you swing the pendulum straight back and forth.

Repeat this simple practice until you are comfortable with it, and can let out the string slowly and smoothly.

TIPS:

Keep the pendulum swinging back and forth while you let out the string length! A common mistake is to keep the pendulum at a “dead hang” over the subject - if you do this, the pendulum will need to draw energy out of your system to get moving when you find the right string length, instead of easily and naturally beginning to rotate when you “feel the pull” which will happen if you keep the pendulum moving straight back and forth in Search Position.

Make sure that you are letting out the string length in a slow, controlled fashion. The lengthening of the cord should be smooth and continuous; don't let the cord drop through the fingertips in jerks.

Keep your arm and wrist relaxed, so that your energy can flow easily through your fingertips and into the Neutral Pendulum.

Do not hold your breath, or hold tension in your body, while you do any vibrational practice. Just relax, breathing normally and fully. Sometimes we will unconsciously hold our breath while focusing on the pendulum movement, which is unnecessary and will actually slow down our progress; the energy needs to flow freely with the breath.

For some people, crossing the legs or having a wrist watch will block the energy running through their body and hand to the pendulum. If you have problems picking up the energy you are testing for, make sure your legs are not crossed and remove any watch or other jewelry on that hand/wrist.

Drink clean water. You must be hydrated to do any type of accurate energetic testing!

STEP 2 - SIMPLE POLARITY TESTING: TESTING DIRECTLY OVER THE OBJECT

Test things of a known vibrational quality first. We know the battery has positive and negative poles in a set location on its body, so we know we should get the Clockwise (CW) spin over the positive pole and a Counter-Clockwise (CCW) spin over the negative pole.

This allows us not only to entrain to testing polarities, but also to find the exact location to hold the cord to test polarity.

2a) Calibrating the string for Clockwise spin over the Positive Pole of the Battery.

Hold the Pendulum directly over the positive pole of your battery (the end with the little nipple sticking out.)

Keep the pendulum between 1 to 3 inches above the top of the battery.

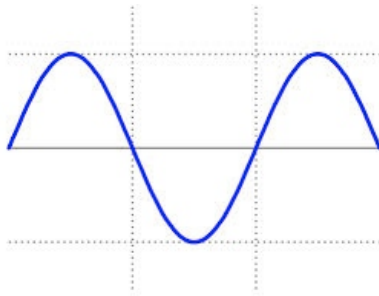

Hold the string right next to where it enters into the pendulum.

Put it into Search Position, moving it straight back and forth with no rotation.

Start letting the string length slowly increase, sliding the string slowly through your fingertips so the increase of string length is smooth with no jerks or sudden drops of the pendulum. You will need to raise your hand a bit as you let out more string length, to keep your pendulum within 1-3 inches of the top of the battery.

When you reach the correct string length (which will be within no more than four inches of string measured from your fingertips to the body of the pendulum) then you will feel a “Pull” on the Pendulum, pulling it into a clockwise rotation.

Fine tune the calibration of the pendulum string (ie, move where you are holding the string up and and down the string just slightly) to see the exact “sweet spot” on the pendulum where it rotates clockwise most strongly.

TIPS for 2a:

You may find that the pendulum first rotates counterclockwise over the positive pole of the battery, rather than clockwise.

If this happens, it means you have found the string length to calibrate the pendulum to go counterclockwise over the positive pole, rather than the string length to go clockwise over the positive pole which happens at a different string length.

Simply continue to let out the string on the pendulum until you find the length where the pendulum rotates most strongly clockwise over the positive pole.

Be aware that this principle is true for all uses of a pendulum string! Think of the pendulum string like a Sine Wave, as seen above; as we tune the pendulum string length, it covers a wavelength which has both positive and negative parts of the cycle. This means we can find a length on the pendulum string which will go clockwise over a particular energy quality, or a different length on the string which will make the pendulum go counterclockwise over that same quality: it is all dependent on where we hold the string! For this reason it is important that we calibrate the string length properly for the particular practice we are doing: in this case, be sure you find the string length which makes the pendulum be pulled Clockwise over the positive pole of the battery.

Feel the string length as an extension of your own energetic field. Think of it as an antenna plugged into your own energy field, picking up the signal of the vibration from the sample (the Positive Pole of the Battery in this instance.) Your energy field uses the string length to tune into the signal from the sample. So the more you can let your energy FEEL the string length as an extension of your own energy field, the more accurate you will be in testing.

As you come close to the right string length on the pendulum, you will begin to feel a pull into a weak rotation of the Pendulum; by moving just slightly higher on the cord (ie, letting a little more cord out through your fingertips) you will find that the pull increases to a strong rotation. If you continue to move higher on the cord, you will find that the pull decreases again, and then disappears as the pendulum returns to just a back and forth motion. You are looking for the exact string length with the STRONGEST clockwise rotation over the Positive Pole of the Battery.

After you find the exact string length for the strongest clockwise rotation, you may notice that at another place, higher up the cord, you also get a strong CW rotation. In fact this is at an even multiple of the string length you first found (ie at twice the original string length, three times the original string length, etc.). These are all “Octaves”, or repetitions, of the correct string length. Any of these locations will work, but for simplicity look for the first location of strong CW spin on the cord and use that (ie the location where you get the strong response with the shortest amount of cord let out through the fingers.)

As discussed before, you can find different places on the cord where you get a clockwise reaction vs. a counterclockwise reaction. You are just looking for the string length for the clockwise reaction, and ignoring the counterclockwise reaction string length.

When the pendulum has the proper energy quality to detect a specific similar energy quality (ie reaches the proper resonant string length when using the Neutral Pendulum), you will FEEL THE PULL of the energy field of the object on the pendulum. It is this “feeling the pull” which is critical to accurate testing: the pendulum moves in resonant response to the energy field of the thing being tested, not our mental projection to make it move.

Remember to feel the pendulum as an extension of your energy field, and keep your mind clear of thoughts, just focusing on the feeling of the pendulum and its connection to the positive pole of the battery (don't ‘watch’ it from the outside as if it is independent of your energy field). Relax any physical tension in your body, make sure you are breathing normally. Don't have any emotional tension or investment in the outcome of your testing. It is common that students try too hard to “make” the pendulum move, resulting in their blocking the natural Pull until they “give up” on the practice - and then the spin happens immediately once they have stopped blocking it!

The Pull on the pendulum may be subtle at first. Go very slowly as you lengthen the string length, with steady focus of your attention on the Positive Pole of the battery. Be attentive to any sensations you may have in your fingertips, hands, or elsewhere in your body when you reach the correct string length. For example, I feel an electrical tingle in my fingertips when I reach the correct string length, even before there is any visible movement of the pendulum into a rotation.

2b) Testing for Counterclockwise Spin over the Negative Pole of the battery

After you have found the string length which gave you a Clockwise spin of the pendulum over the Positive Pole of the Battery, now turn the battery over and test over the Negative Pole of the Battery.

DO NOT CHANGE THE STRING LENGTH!

Use the SAME string length that worked for you when testing over the positive pole and resulted in the pendulum being pulled Clockwise.

If you have found the correct string length to test Polarity, then at the same string length you found for step 2a you should now find that the pendulum is pulled Counterclockwise when over the Negative Pole of the battery.

You have thus found the string length for testing Polarity; when the pendulum is calibrated to that string length and you put the pendulum into Search Position (straight back and forth) over the battery, it will naturally be pulled into a Clockwise spin over the Positive Pole, and when held over the Negative Pole it will naturally be pulled into a Counterclockwise spin.

TIPS FOR 2b:

If you don't get a reaction over the negative pole of the battery at the same string length that you used to get a reaction over the positive pole, start over with calibrating the string length, until you find a string length that will result in the pendulum pulling clockwise over the Positive Pole and at the same string length pulls Counterclockwise over the Negative Pole.

In some cases, students can get a good strong spin over one of the poles of the battery, and not over the other. In this case it may be that there is a blockage in your energy body, which is open to one direction of movement (clockwise for example) but is blocked in the other direction of movement (counterclockwise for example.) Keep practicing until the pendulum moves with equal ease in both spin directions! This is actually one of the great gifts of Physical Radiesthesia; it will reveal to us hidden blockages in our energy field, and open up these blockages through our focus on the energetic testing practices.

2c) Testing from One Pole to the Other, and Seeing the Pendulum Movement Over the Center of the Battery

Now that you have found the string length where the pendulum is pulled clockwise over the Positive Pole and Counterclockwise over the Negative Pole, now hold the Battery sideways and test over it from one end to the other.

When you are going over the Negative end the pendulum will spin Counterclockwise; go off the end of the battery's negative pole a few inches, and see how far you can go off that end and still pick up the counterclockwise pull on the pendulum. You will find the pull weakening as you go out from the end of the battery, until it stops altogether and the pendulum go back to a back and forth Search Position. This shows you how far the field of the Battery extends out from its body, which can also show you the level of charge left in a Battery!

As you go from the Negative Pole of the battery towards the Positive Pole, you will find over the Center of the Battery (held sideways) that the Pendulum shifts from Counterclockwise over the Negative Pole to go into a back and forth Search Position over the center of the Battery; this is the neutral zone where one polarity is shifting to the other. As you move the pendulum slightly towards the Positive Pole of the battery, you will find the pendulum now is pulled into a Clockwise rotation.

Play for a bit with this subtle shift in the polarity on the Battery; from Counterclockwise on the Negative Pole to Search Position over the Center of the Battery, then to Clockwise as you move towards the Positive Pole. Go back and forth with the pendulum repeatedly over the Center of the Battery to sensitize yourself to this subtle switch of polarity that happens as move over the Center to one side or the other of the Battery.

TIPS FOR 2c:

This practice of going off the end of the battery to see how far its energy field extends off the end before it stops, then back over the center to see / feel the switch in polarity, will greatly improve your sensitivity to detecting energetic field qualities. Take your time with this practice and it will pay great dividends!

This practice demonstrates that Physical Radiesthesia can detect the energy fields around objects which are known to modern science. In Physics today it has been shown that around the poles of a battery there is an empirically present spin direction of energy at the two poles, the same as the spin directions created by the two poles of a magnet. However we as human beings normally cannot perceive this invisible spin direction of the energy field. Through Physical Radiesthesia, we can connect our own energy field to empirically present external energy fields through the medium of the calibrated (tuned) pendulum, making the invisible world visible to us.

2d) Using the Pendulum Calibrated for Polarity to test Polarities on any Object

Now that you have found that you can accurately detect the polarity on the battery with the calibrated Pendulum, you can use that Pendulum at that calibrated string length to accurately determine the Polarities on any object!

Take a pencil or pen and test over its two ends with the Pendulum calibrated for Polarity. Which end of the Pencil or Pen does the Pendulum spin Clockwise over (showing positive polarity) and which end does it spin CounterClockwise over (showing negative polarity?)

TIPS FOR 2d:

Everything in our world has Polarity. You can test a person's two eyes, two lungs, two arms etc. and you will find the pendulum will reveal the polarity of each side. All objects also have polarities which can be determined by the pendulum.

There are particular practical applications for polarity in healing, however at this stage one of the major purposes of this practice is recognizing when a pendulum is reacting to polarity (rather than to something else), so we can keep polarity as a separate variable to other information which we can gain in our Master Energy Science of Radiesthesia.

Remember that you have to find the correct string length which will allow you to test Polarity (by calibrating the string on something which you know has specific polarities, ie the battery) before you test things of unknown polarity. The pendulum must always be calibrated for polarity before doing polarity testing.

B) Developing Advanced Levels of Testing Skill through Polarity Testing

Now that you can test for Polarity directly over an object, we will develop your skills through a series of practices which allow you to test energy in more subtle ways.

These methods apply not only to Polarity testing, they apply to all Pendulum testing which you will learn in this entire series of trainings. These methods apply to all the Pendulums we will use, and to all Vibrations you will learn to test.

Remember that the principle behind all these methods is Energy follows Attention. As you will see, it is your focusing your attention.

ADVANCED METHOD 1: TESTING BY TOUCHING WITH THE INDEX FINGER OF THE NON-DOWSING HAND

Instead of holding the pendulum directly over the Battery Pole, we are now going to hold our pendulum off to the side of the Battery.

KEEP THE SAME STRING LENGTH YOU HAVE FOUND IN STEP 2 FOR TESTING POLARITY, DO NOT CHANGE THE STRING LENGTH FOR THE REST OF THE EXERCISE ONCE YOU HAVE CALIBRATED IT PROPERLY.

Instead of the pendulum testing directly over the energy field of the Battery, we will use the index finger of our non-dowsing hand (ie, the hand that is not holding the pendulum) to touch the Pole of the battery. We will now learn that we can run the vibration information through our own body to the pendulum which does not have to be directly over the energy field being tested.

Touch the Positive Pole of the Battery with the Index Finger of the non-dowsing hand. Keep your attention of the Positive Pole of the Battery, and link that awareness to the pendulum held in the dowsing hand. See what direction the Pendulum spins: does it go clockwise as it did also when held directly over the Battery, or does it go counterclockwise now that you are touching the battery with the index finger of the other hand?

Now use the Index Finger of the non-dowsing hand to touch the Negative Pole of the Battery. Does the pendulum go Counterclockwise as it did when testing directly over the Battery, or does it now go Clockwise?

This practice in reality may show that the pendulum reverses direction from what it showed directly over the battery, when you are testing with the index finger of the non-dowsing hand; or it may show that it does NOT reverse direction, and tests just the same as when testing directly over the battery.

TIP FOR ADVANCED METHOD 1:

Some French Radiesthesia texts teach that there is always a reversal when using the index finger of the opposite hand, however this is not the case; it is different for different people, however I find that for most people this reversal does not happen. When it does reverse, it is because the polarity of the index finger of the non-dowsing hand is changing the information the pendulum picks up, but again this does not happen in most cases.

The important thing is for you to see whether or not a reversal takes place for YOU when you use the index finger of the other hand, and take this into account if you are testing object by touching them with the non-dowsing hand!

ADVANCED METHOD 2: TESTING BY POINTING WITH INDEX FINGER THE NON-DOWSING HAND

This is basically the same as Method 1, only now we are not physically touching the Poles of the Battery, we are just pointing towards them with the Index Finger of the non-dowsing hand.

See if you can pick up the spin direction off the battery using this method of pointing toward the pole of the battery (you must also have your attention directed to it) or not. Some students will immediately be able to do this, others need to practice a bit before this more subtle method begins to work for them.

This method allows testing of distant objects or people through pointing towards their energetic fields.

ADVANCED METHOD 3: TESTING BY LOOKING AT THE OBJECT

Now instead of testing over the energy field, or touching it with the opposite hand, or pointing towards it, we simply LOOK at the object we are testing to see if we can test it accurately. Look at the positive pole of the Battery while remaining aware (feeling) the pendulum in your hand calibrated to test Polarity; see if you are able to then pick up the polarity information accurately just by looking at it.

This will work for some students immediately, others will need more practice before it works correctly. It is primarily a matter of energetic focus on attention. This method allows testing of distant objects or people just by looking at them.

ADVANCED METHOD 4: TESTING ONLY BY FOCUSED ATTENTION

The final step in developing sensitivity and accuracy in testing energetic qualities is to be able to test an energy field simply by putting your attention on it, ie your energetic awareness. In this method we do not even look at the object; we know where it is, and we put our attention on it, but we do not look at it with our eyes. Try this now with the poles of the battery; know where it is, then put your attention on the positive pole while looking elsewhere - does your pendulum turn clockwise or does it not react? Try it on the negative pole as well.

TIPS FOR ADVANCED METHOD 4:

All the advanced methods are based on the key principle “Energy follows Attention.” It is always your attention to the energy field of the item you are testing that creates the link which makes testing possible. Touching, pointing, and looking are in reality just ways to help keep your attention on what is being tested; when develop skill in Advanced Method 4, you will experience this fact directly.

This method is the desired final step of development in these Vibrational Testing practices: attaining the ability to test any energetic field just by putting our attention on it, creating a link through energetic awareness without needing to look at it, point to it, test over it etc. When this practice is mastered it signifies a major advance in one’s own internal development, and opens up the possibility of highly advanced practices.

Note that this sequence of Steps we have gone through is applicable to all forms of Vibrational Radiesthesia, not just testing for Polarity! Whatever step level you found could work for you - whether you require testing directly over the object, or whether you reached all the way up to Method 4 in testing through pure attention - can be applied to testing any energy quality, whether polarity, BG3, or any energy quality in the complete spectrum discovered by the French researchers.

C) Polarity Testing: Short Summary and Practice Exercises

SHORT SUMMARY

After you have mastered the steps of Polarity Testing described earlier, you can follow these steps for practical Polarity Testing of a subject:

1. Put the loop at the end of the Neutral Pendulum over your pinky finger on your dowsing hand, coil the cord in your palm, and hold the pendulum string right next to the body of the pendulum.
2. Put the pendulum into Search Position over the Positive Pole of a Battery, calibrate the string length for the strongest Clockwise spin over the Positive Pole. Keep that string length, then turn over the Battery to test the Negative Pole to be sure at that same string length you get a good strong Counterclockwise spin over the Negative Pole. If so, you have successfully calibrated the Pendulum to test any person or object for Polarity. You can put the Battery aside, it is only used for Calibrating the string length of the Pendulum for polarity, and is not needed thereafter for the actual testing of the subject.
3. Hold the pendulum at the calibrated string length for Polarity, while connecting to the area of the subject you are testing for Polarity. This connection can be done through whichever stage you have found in your testing works for you: testing directly over the subject, touching it with the opposite hand, pointing to it, looking at it, or just placing attention on it.

Remember that if you found that the pendulum reverses spin direction when you touch or point to something with the opposite hand, that you have to know this will happen when you are testing using that method. If you do get reversals, try testing directly over the subject or by looking at it to avoid confusion through this reversal issue.

EXERCISES TO PRACTICE YOUR POLARITY TESTING SKILLS:

1. DEVELOPING SENSITIVITY TO POLARITY SHIFTS

Each day calibrate your pendulum for Polarity on the Battery, then slowly move the calibrated pendulum over the Battery held horizontally.

- a) Start off of one end of Battery and see how far off the end you begin to pick up the "Pull" of the spin for that polarity (this will begin at the edge of the energy field of the Battery)
- b) then move slowly toward that pole of the Battery
- c) then over that half of the Battery until you get to the middle of the Battery (observing the transition to Search Position when you are in the exact middle)
- d) then observing the pendulum picking up the opposite spin direction as it moves from over the middle of the Battery toward the opposite Pole

e) then continue over the body of the Battery, off of that end to see how far off the end you can go before you no longer pick up the spin of that polarity (showing you have reached the edge of the energy field of the battery again)

Continue to move back and forth slowly over the body of the battery, passing over the Battery in its entirety 12 times (ie, 6 passes in each direction: 6 times right to left, and 6 times left to right). This will develop tremendous sensitivity to detecting polarity.

2. TESTING ITEMS FOR POLARITY

Assemble a variety of different household items in front of you, and use the calibrated pendulum to determine:

- * where on the item the Negative and Positive polarities are located (they may be in more than one location on larger items);

- * test off the body of the items to see how far off its physical body you can still pick up the polarity (determining the edge of the energy field of the item).

Also test on living beings; growing plants, animals (such as your household pets), and people (you can use people in front of you, or pictures of people.) Where are the polarities on the plant between the roots and top of the plant? On each leaf? What polarities are the nose and the tail of your cat or dog? What polarities are present on the two eyes, two ears, etc. of people and animals around you?

D) Detecting Color Vibrations: Finding Multiple Resonant Lengths

In the Polarity practice, you learned how to test for just one specific Resonant Length. Now you will develop the ability to test for multiple Resonant Lengths, which are in a sequential series.

You will also in this exercise be developing sensitivity to the vibration of multiple colors within the spectrum, a skill we will take much further in the next class in this training series, The Universal Vibrational Spectrum.

NEEDED FOR THIS PRACTICE:

A set of 6 primary colors: Red, Orange, Yellow, Green, Blue, and Indigo. Please see the downloadable page for this training which contains squares of these 6 colors, collected on one page for you to print out on a color printer and then cut the squares out with scissors to prepare them for testing. If you do not have access to a color printer, you can simply go to an office supply store and buy colored paper in these 6 colors. Please make sure that you get paper which has the strong primary color of each of the 6, not different odd tones of that color (ie, you need pure Red and not light pink, nor terra cotta, etc.). The primary color has the clear vibration we need for this testing practices.

A Neutral Pendulum (Spherical; basic “vortex” / spiral shaped pendulums are also acceptable) with a long string.

THE DETECTING COLOR VIBRATIONS PRACTICE:

- 1) Place the 6 color squares in a line running either horizontally (left to right) or vertically (bottom to top) in front of you. Put them into proper color sequence, ROYGBI: Red first, followed by Orange, Yellow, Green, Blue, and Indigo. This way they are in the proper sequential order for testing.
- 2) Begin with placing the loop at the end of the Pendulum string around the pinky finger of your dowsing hand (the hand you write with), coil the cord in the palm, and put the pendulum in Search Position swing as described in the earlier section entitled “Fundamental Method for Beginning all Pendulum Testing.”
- 3) Put the Neutral Pendulum in Search Position (thumb and forefinger holding the pendulum string right where it connects into the body of the pendulum) over the Red square. Start calibrating the string over Red, sliding the string through your fingertips slowly until you feel the pendulum being pulled into strong CW spin when you reach the resonant length for Red. Be aware that the Red calibration on the string is very close to the pendulum, look within the first couple of inches of the string for the pull reaction.

Each of the primary colors in the series then have their resonant lengths a little higher up the cord.

- 4) When you find the Resonant Length for Red (shown by the Pendulum going into CW rotation over the Red color when you reach a particular string length), let the pendulum continue to rotate for minute or two over the Red. The first thing this accomplishes is that it begins to entrain your energy system to detect the Red vibration.
- 5) While you continue to test over the color (with the pendulum spinning CW at the Resonant Length for that color), pay attention to any sensations you have in your body when testing a specific color. Where do you feel energy in your body when testing that color? Do you like or dislike the feeling you get from the color? Does it make you comfortable or uncomfortable?

NOTE: As a general rule, it is important to pay attention to any feelings you have in your body when testing specific Vibrations. These internal feelings are created by your own vibrational energy responding to the vibration you are testing; these feelings become an excellent guide to recognizing different energies as you start entraining to these vibrations. You may find that every time you test a specific color (or other vibration) that you get a particular sensation in some part of your body (hot or cold, tingling, heavy or light, particular type of energy movement, etc.) This feeling in this body area can become your “marker” of being exposed to certain invisible vibrations.

The sensations felt in the body from a particular vibration (in this case, a color) vary from person to person. Pay attention to what is true for you, not how other people experience these energies internally. For myself, when I get to the Resonant Length on the pendulum cord for a vibration I am calibrating to, I feel an electrical tingle in my fingertips when I hit the “sweet spot” on the cord, even before the pendulum begins to rotate CW. Certain vibrations give me a feeling of contraction in the head, others an expansion in the chest, others a twist in the stomach, etc. See what is true for you.

As you test the colors, do NOT expect that you will simply feel an energy of a color in a specific Chakra of your body; many books today talk about the way that the base chakra is Red, the sex chakra Orange, etc. That paradigm is only one particular set of correspondences out of many, and where you feel the energy of that color in your body may be very different.

- 6) After experiencing the effect the Color has on your internal sensations, keep the cord at the length for that color (Red to start with) and then move it the color it is set for to the next color in the sequence; in other words, with the Pendulum set to rotate CW over Red, then move the Pendulum over the Orange color. You want to be sure that the Pendulum ONLY rotates CW over the color it is set for, not over the next color in the sequence as well. If you have found the true sweet spot (the place on the cord which gives you the absolute strongest CW rotation over the thing it is set for) then the Pendulum will only rotate over the color it is set for; if however you are a bit too high or low on the cord, you could be getting a reaction on the color it is set for as well as to the next color in the sequence (ie, the cord is calibrated in that case to a length which is in between the two colors.) By testing over the next color in the sequence, you can make sure you have found the sweet spot and the pendulum rotates only over the color it is calibrated for, not the next color in the sequence.

- 7) Keeping the Pendulum over the next color in the sequence, let a bit more of the cord out through your fingertips as you move the pendulum in the back and forth Search Position, until you find slightly higher up the cord the sweet spot for the color you are now over. Red will appear on the cord close to the Pendulum body, then Orange a bit higher on the cord, then Yellow a bit higher still, etc. - the colors move sequentially up the cord, until you find the length for Indigo which will be the longest string length.

The Resonant Lengths you find on the string are usually not identical to the length of the scientific wavelength for the color; the EMF wavelength is a purely quantitative measurement, whereas your testing for the color is a Qualitative measurement which takes into account many more subtle phenomena which affect living beings like ourselves. The type and size of your pendulum, the material it is made of, and many other factors can affect where exactly you find the Resonant Length on the string.

- 8) Go through the entire sequence of colors; for each color you will find the Resonant Length on the cord of the Pendulum which creates the CW pull stay with the pendulum pulling CW over that color for a time so you can entrain your energy system to detecting that vibration, and also in order to experience the sensations in your body which arise from interaction with that vibration keeping the pendulum on the string length for this color, move the pendulum in search position over the next color in the series, to see that it only rotates CW over the color it is set for, not the next color in the series. If it does rotate over the next color, you need to slightly adjust where you are holding the pendulum string until it does not react over the next color (this is often a fairly small adjustment to where you are holding the pendulum string, getting you to the exact sweet spot on the cord for the color you are calibrated to) then adjust the string length a little higher up the string, until you find the length that creates the CW pull over the color you are now over. Continue this process for the entire set of 6 colors.
- 9) After having tested each color individually in the method given above, now go back to holding the pendulum string right next to the body of the pendulum and test over Red again. This time, instead of spending time over each color for awhile, you will move as soon as you find the sweet spot on the cord for one color you will move the pendulum over the next color in the series and calibrate to its sweet spot. Move as quickly as is comfortable from one color to the next, adjusting the calibration of the cord swiftly for each color in turn. This step creates skill in rapidly tuning into one vibration after another.

Remind yourself to have an internal appreciation for the gift of this practice: that you now can energetically tune into one subtle vibration after another, experiencing the “Harmony of the Spheres” of the different Divine Vibrations which make up our world.

The more you have a spiritual appreciation of these deeper realities you are actually testing, the more these practices will transform you to higher state of consciousness and spiritual evolution.

E) Solutions to Common Problems in Learning Vibrational Testing

1) “I Can’t Feel Anything When I Dowse; I don’t get any Pendulum reactions.”

This comes from your energy system not connecting to the energy field of what is being tested. Some considerations:

- a) An energetic pathway needs to be formed from your energy through your hand, into the pendulum and detecting the energy field of the thing being tested. Remember that “Energy follows Attention”; continue to practice, with attention on these elements and otherwise quieting the mind from distractions.
- b) Not being able to feel anything is a sign of energetic blockage or “numbness”; allow yourself to slowly and gently extend your feeling capacity, only at the speed you feel comfortable with. Give yourself permission to make this a gradual process if that feels safer to you. Remember to breath into any area of the body where the area feels stuck.
- c) There may be subconscious hesitation to begin to perceive the invisible world around us, especially if in one’s youth this was presented as being dangerous or threatening. Relax into the process, knowing that this process is entirely natural.

2) Emotions well up when allowing yourself to feel vibrations with the dowsing practice. Not wanting to feel your feelings leads to “armoring” parts of the body (clamping down with energetic restrictions) which makes the dowsing practices more difficult.

Because vibrational dowsing puts us in touch with our feeling nature, we can become aware of energetic blocks and suppressed emotions. See this as a beautiful gift, and not as a problem. Be gentle with yourself, and in the appropriate time and place allow yourself to release and process through the emotions and blocks. This of course not only releases the blocks to your accurate Vibrational Testing, it more importantly opens up your full vitality and feeling life. See Vibrational training as a process of self-transformation, not just a mechanical series of techniques.

3) A person is able to pick up some phenomena well, but others less well or not at all (example; can pick up a CW spin, but not a CCW energetic spin).

This happens because your energy system at first can perceive certain energetic phenomena and not others; continue to practice and your capacity will continue to expand. Also there may be blockages in your system which allow you to resonate with a particular movement (CW for example) but not a different movement (CCW for example): continue to practice and these blockages will open up, allowing your energy system to enjoy a full range of movement.

4) “I get reactions on the Pendulum, but it happens at any string length: string length doesn’t seem to affect it.”

This shows that you are picking up ambient energy from the thing being tested, but your energy system is not connecting with precision to the string length of the pendulum as an “antenna” to fine tune the energies you are detecting. Relax and focus on feeling the string length as an extension of your own energy field, consciously using the variable length as an antenna.

5) “I feel tired after doing a bit of dowsing, but I haven’t really done anything that can be considered hard work?”

Although the physical body doesn’t have any hard work in our first learning to dowse energy fields, the energy body is being called on to do work it is not used to. Especially in the beginning, when new energy pathways are being laid down and stabilized in the body, this can be tiring to some people. For other people with different constitutions (or more used to energetic work) they do not find it as tiring. If you find it tiring, take regular breaks to take a drink of water, take a walk in the sun and fresh air, etc. then return to the practice. You may also want to eat a snack to keep the blood sugar up.

6) The Practices go fine at first, then you start getting chaotic reactions.

This is common and has several possible causes:

- a) Your energy system has to open up new energetic pathways to connect through the pendulum to the thing being tested. At the beginning, there can be energetic chaos as the energy system gets confused or overwhelmed, until the pathway gets laid down and stable. This problem tends to go away after a few hours or days.
- b) Your attention on what you were doing was clear in the beginning, but as you continue your mind begins to drift off of the practice. Relax and stay focused on what you are testing.
- c) You get tired, and your accuracy declines the more tired you get. See number (5) above.

7) “My Dowsing reaction seems different from what our protocol is supposed to be.”

This may be as a result of some of the factors above (chaos in the system, tired, etc.). One thing to look for is any regularities in this different reaction: does a particular pattern of dowsing reaction recur?

- a) This may be your energy system transposing the protocol from one practice onto another. Our energy body has a very simple form of intelligence, like a Dog which has learned a new trick. When trying to teach it the new “trick” it may instead automatically repeat what it learned before. So for example, you may get reactions for positive and negative polarities when you are in fact testing for a different phenomenon, like color qualities. Continue to work on the new protocol until it gets a new pathway laid down.
- b) Related to the above point, you may have learned a particular energetic practice from a different body of work which is getting superimposed on your Vibrational Radiesthesia practice.
- c) It may be that your energy system is trying to tell you something that is important for you about the thing you are testing: we call this giving you “secondary information” about the thing you are testing. The only way it knows to try to communicate this other information is in particular pendulum movements which are different from the standard protocol. For example, in dowsing colors the pendulum might reverse spin direction over a particular color from the energy system trying to tell you “pay attention to this color I really like it” or “I don’t like this color.” These types of secondary information reactions are individual and not generalizable; the rule is just to observe what happens for you and see if there is a standard pattern to it which can be understood.

8) “I get opposite reactions for polarity testing: over the positive pole of the battery my pendulum goes CCW and over the negative pole CW.”

- a) It could be you are finding the point of the string which gives you the “opposite half of the wave”, ie it is a point where polarities show opposite spin directions. Simply continue to move along the length of the string and find a location to hold the string where the polarities test with Positive as CW and Negative as CCW.
- b) Your own polarity could be reversed, a phenomenon known to Educational Kinesiology. You can find information on the internet and in bodies of work such as Brain Gym about practices that help correct this type of polarity reversal, such as the “Cross Crawl” practice.

REMEMBER THAT YOU ARE ONLY LEARNING HOW TO PRACTICE WITH THE MATERIAL YOU LEARN IN THIS CLASS.

DEVELOPING REAL SKILL IN VIBRATIONAL TESTING REQUIRES REGULAR DAILY PRACTICE OF THESE METHODS OVER AN EXTENDED PERIOD OF TIME (AS IS TRUE OF ALL SKILLS.)

V. THE PERSONAL WAVELENGTH

A) Finding Your Own Personal Wavelength

Every person has a unique vibrational quality. We can tune into that vibration, and test which things are strengthening or weakening to that person, through the following “Personal Wavelength” method which is derived from French Physical Radiesthesia.

NEEDED FOR THIS PRACTICE:

A Neutral Pendulum (Spherical or IKUP; basic “vortex” / spiral shaped pendulums are also acceptable) with a long string.

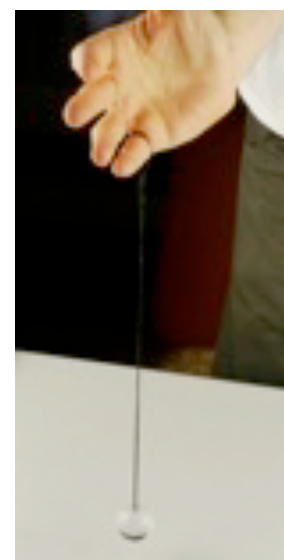

A Witness of the Person, Animal, or Plant you are testing. For our basic testing, we will be testing ourselves and can just use the back of the non-dowsing hand as our witness. Otherwise we could use a photograph of ourselves or another person, or a vibrational sample taken from the energy system we are wanting to test the Personal Wavelength of.

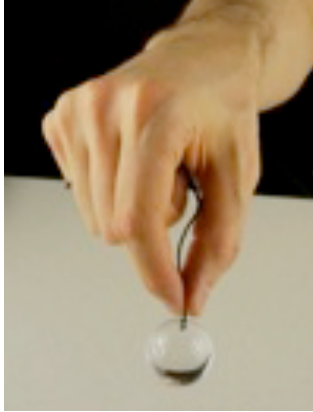

Some items to test to see if they are strengthening or weakening. In the BioGeometry® Foundation Training, we use a variety of sugar samples to see which are strengthening or weakening to us. For this online course, gather a few different nutritional supplements and/or foods together to test.

PERSONAL WAVELENGTH STEP 1: PREPARATION

The preparation stage is the same as for testing for Polarity in the previous section.

1a) Tie a loop at the end of the pendulum string. Put this loop over the little finger of the hand you are going to hold the pendulum in (this should be whichever hand you write with normally, as that is the hand you tend to have the most sensitivity in using). If the pendulum should swing out of your grasp, the loop will keep it connected to your hand. The loop on the little finger also prevents the end of the string hanging out of your hand, creating a “secondary antenna” that could confuse your finding the right string length to hold the pendulum at in order to detect polarity.

1b) Coil the loose string into the palm of your hand, and hold the string right next to where it is connected to the pendulum itself. Hold the string between the index finger and thumb, with these two fingers lightly touching the pendulum itself. This keeps the string from getting in your way, and also will allow you to easily control the string length as you slowly let out the string through your fingertips in the next step.

1c) Swing the Pendulum straight back and forth, ie swinging in front of you and back straight towards you. Do not let the pendulum rotate to either side, just a straight back and forth movement.

Slowly let the string slide through your fingertips, gradually and in a controlled manner letting the string length increase bit by bit, until you come to the end of the string (as much as you can let out with it still tied to your pinky finger.)

This is called the SEARCH POSITION; a straight back and forth movement of the pendulum over the item being tested.

1d) Then start the practice over again, coiling the cord back in your palm and letting the string length slowly increase again as you swing the pendulum straight back and forth. Repeat this simple practice until you are comfortable with it, and can let out the string slowly and smoothly.

TIPS FOR STEP 1:

Keep the pendulum swinging back and forth while you let out the string length! A common mistake is to keep the pendulum at a “dead hang” over the subject - if you do this, the pendulum will need to draw energy out of your system to get moving when you find the right string length, instead of easily and naturally beginning to rotate when you “feel the pull” which will happen if you keep the pendulum moving straight back and forth in Search Position.

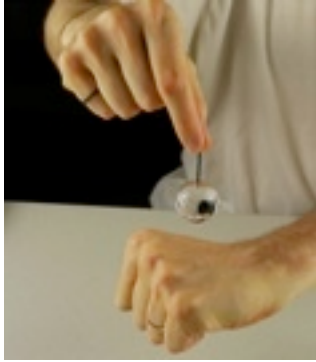

Make sure that you are letting out the string length in a slow, controlled fashion. The lengthening of the cord should be smooth and continuous; don’t let the cord drop through the fingertips in jerks.

Do not hold your breath, or hold tension in your body, while you do any vibrational practice. Just relax, breathing normally and fully. Sometimes we will unconsciously hold our breath while focusing on the pendulum movement, which is unnecessary and will actually slow down our progress; the energy needs to flow freely with the breath.

For some people, crossing the legs or having a wrist watch will block the energy running through their body and hand to the pendulum. If you have problems picking up the energy you are testing for, make sure your legs are not crossed and remove any watch or other jewelry on that hand/wrist.

Drink clean water. You must be hydrated to do any type of accurate energetic testing!

PERSONAL WAVELENGTH STEP 2: TUNING THE PENDULUM FOR YOUR OWN PERSONAL WAVELENGTH

Now we are going to tune the pendulum to your own personal wavelength, so we can test what is strengthening or weakening to your own energetic field.

If you are testing yourself, you can hold the pendulum over the back of your non-dowsing hand. (You could also hold the pendulum over a photograph or other witness of yourself, but for the moment we will use the back of your hand method.) When testing over the back of your hand, your awareness needs to be on the totality of your own energy field, NOT on the back of the hand itself; we are just using the back of the hand as a convenient site for focusing on our energy field. If we were to focus on the back of the hand specifically, we could end up calibrating the string length to test the Polarity of the back of the hand, rather than calibrating to our entire energy field (our Personal Wavelength.)

With our focus on our energy field while testing on the back of our hand, the effect will be the same as testing on a photo of ourselves, or over any other part of our body on either the left or right side of the body. Our energy field has a specific vibrational quality we can tune to which is SEPARATE from general polarity, and so when focusing on our energy field it won't matter if we are testing over the back of the right hand, or left hand, or the right or left knee etc. These things all have separate polarity between the right and left sides, but our energy field remains uniform over all of these!

With the loop at the end of the string on your pinky finger, and the cord coiled in your palm, hold the pendulum at the end of the string where it enters the body of the pendulum; your index finger and thumb hold the string and are lightly touching the body of the pendulum.

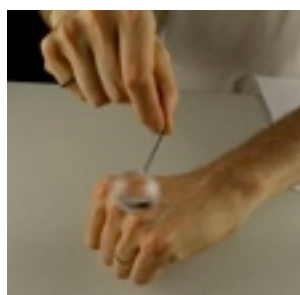

Hold the pendulum over the back of your non-dowsing hand. Move the pendulum into a straight back and forth motion (Search Position), while very slowly letting string length increase by letting the string move through your fingertips.

At a particular point as the string length increases, the string length will go into resonance with your "personal wavelength." When resonance is created between the string length and your energy field, you will feel a PULL on the pendulum which pulls the pendulum into a ROTATION. This rotation may be either Clockwise or Counterclockwise, depending on the point you find on the string (the principle behind this was discussed in the previous section on Polarity testing); look for the string length where you feel the strongest CLOCKWISE pull on the pendulum.

When you have found the string length where the pendulum has the strongest clockwise rotation over the back of your hand, you have now calibrated the pendulum string to your energy field, ie your “Personal Wavelength.” However we have to be sure that you actually calibrated the string length to your Personal Wavelength, NOT to the polarity of the back of your hand as in the previous practice on Polarity! So continuing to let the calibrated pendulum rotate clockwise over the Back of your hand, turn your hand OVER so that you are now testing over the Palm of your hand; if the pendulum continues to rotate clockwise over the Palm, just as it did over the back of your hand, you have successfully calibrated for the Personal Wavelength.

If instead the pendulum DOES reverse spin direction to counterclockwise when you turn your hand over, then you mistakenly calibrated for polarity of the hand and not for the general energy field / Personal Wavelength. Start over, calibrating the string length over the back of the non-dowsing hand with your focus on your general energy field (not your hand itself) to find the true Personal Wavelength, ie the string length which creates the strongest Clockwise pull of the pendulum over your energy field.

TIPS FOR STEP 2:

Don't just focus on the pendulum itself while you are letting out the string length during this tuning process. Also be aware of any subtle sensation you feel in your fingertips, hand, or body as you find the correct string length. As you become sensitized to this practice, you will be able to feel a vibration in your hand or body (like a small electric charge) when you find the right string length. You will find that you will know the correct string length through this inner feeling, even before the pendulum itself moves into the clockwise rotation (it usually takes an additional moment after you feel this sensation in your hand before the pendulum begins to rotate.) The more you can sensitize your body to feel when you are 'tuned in', rather than just looking at the pendulum for a reaction, the more accurate you will be with this method.

You should only get the rotational reaction, ie “feel the pull” as the string length goes into resonance with the wavelength of the sample, at a small area on the cord. If you get a rotation all the time over the sample, then you are just testing ambient energy and not tuning into the specific vibration with the string length.

Feel the string length as an extension of your own energetic field. Think of it as an antenna plugged into your own energy field, picking up the signal of the vibration from the sample. Your energy uses the string length to tune into the signal from the sample. So the more you can let your energy FEEL the string length as an extension of your own energy field, the more accurate you will be in testing.

As you come close to the right string length on the pendulum, you will begin to feel the pull into a weak rotation; by moving just slightly higher on the cord (ie, letting a little more cord out through your fingertips) you will find that the pull increases to a strong rotation. If you continue to move higher on the cord, you will find that the pull decreases again, and then disappears as the pendulum returns to just a back and forth motion. You are looking for the exact string length with the STRONGEST clockwise rotation.

After you find the exact string length for the strongest clockwise rotation, you may notice that at another place, higher up the cord, you also get a strong CW rotation. In fact this is at an even multiple of the string length you first found (ie at twice the original string length, three times the original string length, etc.). Any of these locations will work, but for simplicity look for the first location of strong CW spin on the cord and use that (ie the location where you get the strong response with the shortest amount of cord let out through the fingers).

You can find different places on the cord where you get a clockwise reaction vs. a counterclockwise reaction. You are just looking for the string length for the clockwise reaction, and ignoring the counterclockwise reaction string length.

B) General Testing of Strengthening vs. Weakening Effects on Your Whole Energy Field

Now that you have learned how to tune into your vibrational field, you can use this tuned pendulum to test for what is strengthening or weakening (beneficial or detrimental) for you.

If testing over the back of your hand (testing for yourself), then put the non-dowsing hand over the item being tested for its effect on your energy field and keep testing over the back of your hand.

We are testing our own core energy field vibration when we test Personal Wavelength over the back of our non-dowsing hand; when we then put that non-dowsing hand over a vibrational source (while also focusing our Clear Mind awareness on that same source), then our energy field is affected in some way by that vibrational source. It may be strengthening, weakening, or neutral to our overall energy field. So this method allows us to know exactly what effect any vibrational source has on our (or another person's) overall energy system.

You can also test for yourself or other people by placing the pendulum over a witness of yourself or them (photograph, hair, etc.), calibrate the string length to maximum clockwise spin over the witness of the person you are testing, and keep the pendulum over their witness while you connect to the item you are testing (by placing the non-dowsing hand on the item, or looking at it, any of the methods of connecting to the item to be tested which we reviewed in the section on Polarity testing).

When you test the person for a substance or vibration that is STRENGTHENING for them, the clockwise rotation of the pendulum will INCREASE when they are connected to that vibration.

When you test them for a substance or vibration that is NEUTRAL (okay) for them, the clockwise rotation will STAY THE SAME.

When you test them for a substance or vibration that is SLIGHTLY WEAKENING for them, the clockwise rotation will SLOW DOWN.

When you test a substance or vibration that puts them into a BORDERLINE CONDITION, the pendulum will go back to a search position, back and forth (ie, the border between a clockwise or counterclockwise spin)

These substances or vibrations that cause a slowdown of the clockwise rotation, or which put the pendulum back into Search Position, should be avoided by the person or subject being tested; if that substance or vibration cannot be avoided, then we must find corrections which will strengthen the person's overall energy field in the face of this challenge.

When you test someone for a substance or vibration that is VERY WEAKENING for them, the clockwise rotation of the pendulum will stop, the pendulum will go into a straight back and forth movement and then REVERSE SPIN DIRECTION TO GO COUNTERCLOCKWISE.

These substances or vibrations which create CCW reaction ie, which reverse the normal spin direction of the pendulum tuned to our core vibration must be avoided by the person as they are very harmful to them. For those things which cannot be avoided (such as some Electro-Magnetic field exposures), then those vibratory fields need to be corrected so that the person stays strong. That is where vibrational tools, and other energetic techniques, come in.

Pick a number of similar items, which have only small differences in their energetic effect on you. It may be different foods or supplements of a similar nature. They may be different types of apples, or different brands of the same supplement. This can be done in a store, or in your home; it is usually easiest to start with gathering a selection of foods or supplements you have already purchased and have in your home, to see how they affect you.

Slowly test each item for its effect on you, then move to the next item and see its effect. Pay attention to the small difference in strengthening or weakening between one item and the next; even for items which appear to be equally strengthening or weakening, go slowly and you will be able to see that one is just slightly more so than the other item.

This practice will develop great sensitivity to small differences in the effect of various materials and vibrations on your core energy field.

Test for yourself on similar items for their subtle differences of affect on you. When you develop skill in testing on yourself, you may choose to test these same items on another Being (person, animal, plant etc.) after the first week, using their witness (photograph, lock of hair or fur, etc.) to calibrate to their personal wavelength and seeing what subtle differences the items have on them; this is very interesting because you will sometimes find that the item does not have the same strengthening or weakening effects that it has on you!

Every day for the first week of your practice, collect different groups of items which you have in your home and office, to test for their effect on you. Do at least a dozen items a day; this will develop an excellent entrainment to this technique. These items you test can include:

- Foods (especially those which are common allergens: grains, dairy, those with added sweeteners or preservatives, etc.)
- Supplements
- Cosmetics and Toiletries (deodorant, etc.)

- Essential Oils
 - Your Jewelry
 - Vibrational Tools
 - Electronic Devices (Cellphone etc.)
- or anything else you have in your environment.

The goal is to make a HABIT of testing anything and everything before you have it in your living environment, or put it in or on your body. Getting into this habit can save you considerable money (and suffering) on supplements that don't work, foods that are harmful to you, jewelry or vibrational tools that aren't compatible with your energy field, etc.

For things like electronic devices, you will see that uncorrected cellphones and other devices are very weakening to your energy field. You can then test vibrational corrections to see which one strengthens you the most when applied to the device, so that you stay strong when using or near the device (be aware that you may need to test the placement of an energetic correction at different locations on the device to see where it is most effective; usually vibrational correcting tools need to be placed in path of the line of energy running through the device to be fully effective).

When we find there is a problem (slowing of CW spin, or creation of a CCW spin on the Neutral pendulum calibrated to a person's energy field quality) then we modify the vibration of the energy field we are exposed to (Earth lines, EMF, etc.) through vibrational corrective methods, or we reject the food / supplements etc. which tests as weakening us and choose instead those which are resonant with us (or which strengthen our energy field further.)

SUMMARY OF GENERAL PERSONAL WAVELENGTH TESTING: TESTING THE OVERALL ENERGY FIELD

What we have explored up to this point in this Online Class is PW testing for your overall energy field.

Below is a summary of the basic technique for testing our own overall energy field with PW.

We calibrate the string length of a Neutral Pendulum to our Personal Wavelength (strong CW spin at that string length) by holding it over the back of our hand (or over a witness of ourselves), then keep the pendulum at that string length connected to our energy field. We then connect energetically (through holding, touching, pointing to, etc., AND with our attention focused firmly on) to some external thing we want to test, to know how its energy field affects us (strengthens or weakens us).

When we do basic testing with Personal Wavelength, we find the PW for a specific person's general energy field (or other living being, such as an animal, plant, insect etc.) and then test for what effect another energy field (such as from an Earth Line, EMF source, a nutritional supplement, food, drink, etc.) has on them.

If the energy field of the item being tested is STRENGTHENING to the person's PW we have calibrated to, then the Clockwise rotation of the Neutral Pendulum over their witness increases in speed and amplitude.

If the energy field of the item being tested is COMPATIBLE with the person's PW, then the CW rotation of the Pendulum over their witness stays the same.

If the energy field of the item being tested is SLIGHTLY WEAKENING to the person, then the CW rotation of the Pendulum will slow down but stay Clockwise; the more the pendulum slows, then the more weakening the thing being tested is.

If the energy field of the item being tested is VERY WEAKENING to the person, then the CW rotation of the Pendulum over the witness will slow down and then transition into a back-and-forth search position, which then switches over to a Counterclockwise spin. The stronger the CCW spin of the pendulum, then the more weakening to the person the thing being tested is.

When a problem has been found through the testing of the OVERALL energy field:

When you find there is a problem created in your energy field from a substance or vibration you are testing (slowing of CW spin, or creation of a CCW spin on the Neutral pendulum calibrated to a person's energy field quality) then you either:

- a) Test what will protect you from the detrimental vibration of an energy field we are exposed to (Cellphone, Earth lines, EMF, etc.)
- b) Choose to buy and use items which are resonant with you or which strengthen your field further, and reject the food / supplements etc. which tests as weakening to you.

C) General Personal Wavelength Testing for Another Person

You can test any other person by the Personal Wavelength method, just as easily as you test yourself. This testing can either be directly on the other person's body, or it can be on a witness of them; in the latter case, you can test them at a distance, even from the other side of the world. For Vibrational Testing, distance work is as easy as it is in person.

IMPORTANT NOTE: Testing another person's energy field is an intimate act, which they must agree to before you begin. You must get their explicit permission before you test their energy field, and certainly before you do any corrections for them.

The exceptions to this rule are in cases where the other person cannot deny or grant permission, such as:

- * A young child in need.
- * A person is mentally ill and not coherent, or is on addictive substances that make it impossible to communicate with them.
- * A person who is unconscious.
- * A person who does not speak your language, who is in need.
- * A person in isolation in prison whom you cannot contact directly.

In these cases, either use your best judgement, or if you have some degree of spiritual perception you can ask their Higher Self or Guardian Angel for permission to test and/or energetically balance them.

METHOD 1: TESTING ON ANOTHER PERSON'S BODY

This method can be used if the person we are testing is physically present in the room with us.

STEP 1: Have the person remove any energetic balancing jewelry or other materials carried on their body for the purpose of strengthening or balancing their energy field. We remove these so that we can get a clearer read on what is strengthening or weakening to the person, without interference from the energy balancing items worn on the body.

STEP 2: Ask the person to hold out either of their hands, then hold the Neutral Pendulum over the back of their hand. Calibrate the string length of a Neutral Pendulum so that it captures their Personal Wavelength, ie the string length where you feel the PULL into the strongest Clockwise rotation of the pendulum.

Once you have their PW, ask them to turn their hand over so you are testing over their palm. The pendulum should continue to go clockwise over their palm just as it did over the back of their hand, showing that you calibrated correctly for the PW of their entire energy field and not for Polarity (which would have created a reversal of spin when testing the two sides of their hand, as described earlier in this handout.)

STEP 3: Then while testing on the person's PW (either continuing to test over the back of their hand, or keeping the string length and just having attention on their energy field) have them interact with the energy field you are wanting to test for them:

a) Have them hold an item (food, supplement, energetic tool, etc.) and see how it effects their PW while they hold it. Or:

b) You hold or energetically connect to an item while you are testing and connected to their energy field by testing their PW, and see how the item's energy field affects their PW.

METHOD 2: TESTING ON A WITNESS

If you are testing another person, you can hold the pendulum over something that has their energy field imprinted into it. A photograph of them works well (they should be the only person in the photo). French doctors using vibrational analysis would often use blood or saliva samples of their patients, but we don't have to use those kinds of biological samples.

NOTE: If you don't have a photograph but the person is with you, you could also create a "Paper Natural Vibrational Witness." Just tear out a small square piece of clean white paper and have the person rub the paper over their nose and forehead, getting some skin cells and oil on the paper, and then have the person sign the back of the paper so you will remember it is a sample of them (this also reinforces their vibration on the paper, if it is their own signature.) You can also use this method to create a Paper Natural Vibrational Witness of yourself for testing on a Chart, as described in a later section of this training.

You can also test any animal (using fur from them, or a photo etc.) or any plant (using a leaf or bark from the plant, or a photo etc.) using this method to see what is strengthening or weakening to them.

STEP 1: Put your Neutral Pendulum into Search Position over their Witness. Move the pendulum into a straight back and forth motion, while very slowly letting string length increase by letting the string move through your fingertips. Locate their PW by calibrating the string length for maximum CW spin over the Witness.

STEP 2: You can then hold, touch, or otherwise energetically connect to the item you want to test for them to see how it effects their energy field (as shown by the spin of the pendulum over the witness.) Keep the pendulum over their witness while you connect to the item you are testing (by placing the non-dowsing hand on the item, or looking at it, any method which allows you to energetically connect to the item to be tested.)

Practice testing different people for their Personal Wavelength, getting their permission before beginning. This will develop a sensitivity to tuning into different personal wavelengths.

D) Creating Effective Witnesses By Imprinting Vibrations

In the preceding section we described the three different types of Witnesses, and that we use either Natural Vibrational Witnesses or Imprinted Vibrational Witnesses.

Here is the method you to create an Imprinted Vibrational Witness, so that it carries the actual vibrational imprint of the person you are wanting to energetically test.

BASIC METHOD TO CREATE AN IMPRINTED VIBRATIONAL WITNESS

Note: You must know the person in order to create a dependable Imprinted Vibrational Witness which has accurate vibrational qualities. It is the vibrational imprint of the person which you carry in your own energy field through your experience of them, which you are imprinting into the paper to make this Witness. So you need to know what they look like, what their voice sounds like, and what their energy feels like.

If you are doing work for a person you have never met, it is better to get an actual vibrational witness of the person, which can be a photograph, to work on rather than try to create an Imprinted Vibrational Witness.

STEP ONE: Take a piece of plain white paper, and cut it into small paper squares around 2 to 4 inches of length across.

STEP TWO: Hold the paper square between your two palms; this is so it receives the vibrational information you are generating in your energy field. Create with your mind the IMAGE and the FEELING / VIBRATION and the SOUND OF THE VOICE of the person you are making the mental witness of. Imprint that image and vibration of the person into the White Paper Square.

STEP THREE: Once you have imprinted the paper square, you can use it as a Witness of a person.

TIP 1: We are using the three basic aspects of perception: Visual (sight), Auditory (hearing), and Kinesthetic (feeling) to generate the vibrational information to make the Imprinted Vibrational Witness. By using all three internal powers to make the Witness, it will be the most powerful and dependable; however for most people some of these internal powers are fairly strong, while others are fairly weak.

Use those skills you are strongest in to make the imprint, if some of the other skills are weaker in your system. Don't worry if you are not good at visualizing the Image of the person; in that case focus primarily on bringing up the way their energy feels to you (their vibration) and the sound of their voice. Similarly, if you are very visual but not very kinesthetic or auditory, then focus primarily on generating a clear accurate image of the person and imprinting that onto the paper like a photograph, etc. It is all a matter of bringing up their core vibration to imprint into the paper.

TIP 2: Some people who are primarily visual can hold the paper in front of them and imprint it with the image of the person, seeing their image appear on the white square in their mind's eye (like a Polaroid instant picture developing into a clear solid photograph). In this case, they do not need to hold the paper between their two palms to imprint it, they imprint it by holding it in front of them and imprinting it like a mental photograph.

There are other variations too which can work. It is fine to experiment with what method works best for you to create an Imprinted Vibrational Witness, just be sure to test your ability to use that method by using the Testing procedure described in the next section!

TESTING METHODS TO CONFIRM THE ACCURACY OF YOUR IMPRINTED VIBRATIONAL WITNESS

In Vibrational Testing we never assume a technique has worked, we ALWAYS TEST to be sure it has worked!

Before you start creating and using Imprinted Vibrational Witnesses for practical work, you need to regularly practice making these and test them to make sure they are accurate.

ITEMS NEEDED FOR THIS PRACTICE:

A Natural Vibrational Witness of a person: a photograph, hair sample, etc.

An Imprinted Vibrational Witness you have made of the person.

A Neutral Pendulum

TESTING YOUR IMPRINTED VIBRATIONAL WITNESS

Test over the actual Natural Vibrational Witness of the person with a Neutral Pendulum to determine their Personal Wavelength. Keeping the string length of the pendulum at their PW, then put the pendulum into Search Position over the Imprinted Vibrational Witness you created of them.

If the Imprinted Vibrational Witness you created does have the accurate imprint of their energetic field, then the pendulum will spin clockwise just as strongly over your Imprinted Vibrational Witness as it did over their Natural Vibrational Witness.

If the pendulum spin is weaker over your Imprinted Witness than it was over their Natural Vibrational Witness, then you partially captured their vibrational field but not fully.

If the pendulum stays in back and forth Search Position, then you did not capture their vibrational field at all.

THE “WITNESS PROTECTION PROGRAM”: PROPER USE AND STORAGE OF VIBRATIONAL WITNESSES

This can be anything which has a person’s (or other living being’s) vibrational information, such as a photograph. Remember that you can also make a Paper Natural Vibrational Witness as described earlier, by using a fresh piece of white paper which the person rubs on their forehead, then signs their name on (rubbing on the forehead puts skin oils and cells on the paper which act as a witness; signing the name reinforces the vibrational information, and also allows us to remember whose witness it is).

Treat Witnesses (whether photographs, paper witnesses described above, samples of hair/blood/saliva, etc.) once they are made and used for Radiesthesia testing, as important objects. If you are not going to keep the witness for future use, burn it with the intent of clearing the person’s energy field with the fire. If you do keep it, keep it in an energetically clear environment using what we sometimes refer to as the “Witness Protection Program”. This is based on the discovery by the French Radiesthesiasts that the subtle vibrations from Witnesses can be kept isolated from other vibrations around them by putting them into a type of Radiesthesia “Faraday Cage” that shields the witnesses from external vibrations. The French Radiesthesiasts found that Witnesses could be stored between pieces of graph paper to keep them energetically isolated from the environment (the squared grid on the paper helps to stop the vibration of the witness penetrating the paper.).

Be aware that once you have used a person’s witness to connect to them energetically, you have created a much stronger link between that witness (photo, hair sample, paper they have rubbed on their forehead and signed, etc.) and the person’s energetic field than exists normally.

So any photo, or body sample, or Paper Natural Vibrational Witness etc. you have used as a Witness during any Vibrational Testing or Healing practice, must be treated as an active witness from that point on, and dealt with as described in the preceding paragraph. Significant harm has been done to people by poorly trained energetic “healers” who have used multiple people’s active witnesses piled all together in a stack for “healing treatments”, creating inappropriate energetic mixing between the samples (and leading to complaints of people taking on energetic problems and ailments from their energy field being mixed with other people in the stack, problems which they did not have prior to this mixing).

Be very careful whom you ask to do any energetic healing modality on you, and whom you give your witness to.

One common idea in metaphysical circles is that you can simply “mentally disconnect” a witness from a person’s energy field through an act of intent. While this is indeed possible, in reality many people do not have sufficient focus and skill in this technique to make it work properly; they assume it has worked and then treat the witness poorly, thinking it is disconnected, when in fact it is still connected to the person’s energy field. To avoid this potential problem, follow the Radiesthesia methods described here for dealing with witnesses, don’t assume you have disconnected it completely just through intent.

TIP: If you are saving people's witnesses for future use and keeping them in graph paper as in the French method described above, make sure you fold the edges of the graph paper around the witness on all sides.

TESTING FOR COMPLETE "WITNESS PROTECTION"

A good test is to calibrate the string length on a neutral pendulum to the personal wavelength of the witness, then enclose the witness in the graph paper as described (with edges of the graph paper folded over to seal in the Witness). Then test over and all around the edges of the graph paper to see if you get any "Pull" on the pendulum.

If you do get a "Pull", that means the witness is not completely sealed in by the graph paper and you are picking up its energy field with the pendulum calibrated to its Personal Wavelength, so you know you need to seal the witness in more completely.

Once you can test over and all around the graph paper sealing in the Witness with the calibrated Neutral Pendulum and get NO PULL, then you know you have the witness properly sealed in and protected from external energetic fields which could affect it.

E) Basic Clearing of Items Imprinted by Toxic Vibrations

There is a very important distinction to be made between substances which have intrinsic detrimental vibrations (toxic chemicals for example), and substances which are intrinsically beneficial vibrationally but which have been externally imprinted with detrimental energetic fields from the outside.

Those naturally toxic substances with intrinsic detrimental vibrations must be avoided as much as possible; they cannot be “cleared” of external imprints to make them okay to use (there are possible methods which may reduce their toxicity, but that is a different subject which is more complex.)

Those materials which intrinsically have beneficial vibrations but which test as weakening you because they have absorbed external toxic vibrations into their structure, can be cleared. This includes foods, liquids, jewelry, supplements, homeopathic remedies, etc. which were originally of good quality before being exposed to detrimental vibrations. We will deal with this issue in more detail in the third and final class in this training series, Custom Vibrational Healing. There is a comprehensive overview of over a dozen clearing methods in our How to Use Crystals and Gemstones training.

For now, we will just mention a few easy methods for clearing items.

Items which test for reversing your Personal Wavelength when you test them (reversing your natural CW spin to CCW) but you suspect are simply imprinted with toxicity and are not intrinsically detrimental (such as good quality jewelry, etc.) you can use one or more methods below.

Be sure to test the item again after you work to clear it; don't assume the clearing worked without testing it! When properly cleared, it should now test as either being neutral to your PW (the pendulum spins CW as strong as it normally does) or strengthening to you (the pendulum's CW spin increases beyond your normal PW CW spin intensity).

- 1) If they will not be harmed by water, they can be put under running water for a time.
- 2) Put the item on a Mystic Merlinite (Indigo Gabbro) stone dish, or on a group of these stones used as a bed for putting the item on top of. This stone has excellent clearing properties.
- 3) The most powerful and immediately effective Clearing Device we currently use is the Eco-Laser, a Soft Laser which has been vibrationally imprinted with highly beneficial energies for clearing. A quick shining of this laser on materials creates extremely quick clearing. The clearing effect is even more powerful when using the optional Vertical Wave Antidote insert in the laser (the detrimental nature of Vertical Waves will be taught in the next class in this series, the Universal Vibrational Spectrum.)

F) Basic Testing and Balancing of Toxic Earth Radiations and EMF Effects

Two major environmental sources of harmful vibrations that affect human beings are Toxic Earth Radiations (sometimes referred to as Geopathic Gridlines) and Electro-Magnetic Fields (EMF) from Low-Frequency Home Electrical Appliances and wiring, or from Radio-Wave Frequency Wireless Communication Devices.

BASIC PERSONAL WAVELENGTH TESTING OF EARTH ENERGY

There are both zones (irregularly shaped areas) and lines (straight lines with orientation to specific compass directions) of toxic Earth Radiations which were known to the ancients, and which in modern times were rediscovered by German researchers in the 1900's. These subtle radiation line and zones have been shown in German research to create a wide range of severe maladies; unfortunately most people do not even know these Earth Radiations exist, and how often they are creating serious health issues for people. One of the most important services you can do for yourself or for other people is to test to see if they are exposed to these toxic radiations when they are in their bed (the most important place to check, as they are there for one-third of their life) or sitting in chair they spend a lot of time in (such as a desk chair, or lounge chair.) The German research has shown that these subtle radiations cannot be detected by standard EMF meters; they have to be detected with Radiesthesia.

The basic method we will teach here allows you to see if your energy field is being weakened or severely harmed by Earth Radiations underneath your bed or chair.

STEP 1: Calibrate the Pendulum for your Personal Wavelength, and keep it rotating CW over the back of your hand.

STEP 2: Sit in your chair or lie in your bed, and direct your attention to the energy on the floor beneath you. See if your PW stays strong, or if it slows or completely reverses. If there is weakening or reversal when you put your attention on the ground beneath you, this is usually a sign of detrimental Earth Radiations.

STEP 3: Walk slowly around the outer edge of your bed or chair while testing your PW, or just test over the back of your hand as you move your hand over the perimeter. Note at what locations you find a reversal of you PW, and put a piece of colored tape on the floor there to show you where the problem areas are.

STEP 4: Move your hand over the area around the tape on the floor you laid down in Step 3, to identify which direction the line is running, ie the line connected to the tape you first put down over which you continually test CCW on your PW (whereas you test strongly CW outside of that line where the earth radiation is not affecting you). You will likely see that 2 taped areas on different sides of the bed or chair are points which are connected together in a Geopathic Gridline.

STEP 5: If you can, move the bed or chair off the Earth Radiation lines to avoid them affecting you. Get back in the Chair or on the Bed, and test on PW (with your attention going again to the floor directly beneath you) to see that you are now testing strong again; if you are still getting a reversal, move the bed or chair until you find a location where you stay strong, ie that is moved off of any toxic Earth Lines.

BASIC LEVEL CORRECTION OF A GEOPATHIC GRIDLINE

If you cannot move the chair or bed, then you will need to apply something directly on the line to take away its detrimental radiations affecting you. The good news is that when put something of very good energy quality (holding the Centering Vibration that we will discuss in the next class in this series) on the Earth Line, this can if done correctly change the quality of energy carried on the line so that it no longer harms you. The corrective item usually needs to be put directly on top of the line (or where two lines cross, if you can find that) to be fully effective. It doesn't matter where on the line you put it, it will work placed anywhere directly on the line.

Be sure to test after you put the correction on the line, to see that it is working and that you are now testing strongly CW on PW when you are over the line, whereas before placing the correction you were testing strongly CCW (reversal on PW.)

There are various manufacturers of Vibrational Tools which make devices to put on Earth Energy lines to change their vibration; don't believe any claims made, test for yourself to see what really works.

Also be aware that the toxic radiation that the correction is transforming, can build up to the point that it overwhelms the corrective form, not only rendering it ineffective but also deeply imprinting the correction with toxic energy. So be aware that you must regularly clear the correction you are using, so that this toxic imprinting does not build up. You can use any method described in the previous section, with the fastest and most powerful method being to shine the Eco-Laser directly onto the correction for a few seconds to clean it; this way you can leave the correction in place and not have to remove it for cleaning.

In addition to the devices sold by various vibrational tool manufacturers to correct Earth Energy Lines, you can use high quality stones on the lines; we recommend the Adaptogenic Stones described on our website and taught in our How to Use Crystals and Gemstones training, as they have very high levels of Centering Vibration. Our primary recommendation would be to use the stone Mystic Merlinite right on top of the line, which we stock on our website (and vibrationally test every piece we carry, to ensure it has the right vibrational information to be effective for you.)

BASIC PERSONAL WAVELENGTH TESTING OF EMF

When you do Personal Wavelength testing with your hand over Electro-Magnetic Fields (EMF) from your home wiring, home appliances, or wireless communication devices (cellphones, cell towers, wireless internet modems, etc.) you will normally find that these are weakening, reversing your PW CW spin to strong CCW.

The basic method we will teach here allows you to see if your energy field is being weakened or severely harmed by in areas where you spend a lot of time (or where other people spend a lot of time, especially children as they are especially susceptible to the harmful effects of EMF.)

STEP 1: Calibrate the Pendulum for your Personal Wavelength, and keep it rotating CW over the back of your hand.

STEP 2: Move close to the EMF source you are wanting to test, with your attention going to that source. See if your PW reverses to CCW from the effect of the EMF -- normally it will. Then move away from the EMF source, seeing how far away you have to be to get out of its effects, so that your PW returns to a strong CW spin.

STEP 3: Move beds, chairs, children cribs and play areas, etc. to areas where you are not weakened by the EMF effects. Or you can remove, if possible, the EMF source from the area so that you are now strong in that area; for example, you can replace electrical clock radios (which have may have high fields of EMF) with wind-up or battery driven travel alarms next to the bed, rather than one which plugs into the wall current.

BASIC LEVEL CORRECTION OF AN EMF ISSUE

If you cannot move chairs, beds, play areas etc. away from the area affected by EMF, and you cannot remove the EMF source from the area, then you will need to apply something directly onto the line of energy of the EMF source to take away its detrimental radiations affecting you. Just as with Geopathic Gridlines, when put something of very good energy quality (holding the Centering Vibration that we will discuss in the next class in this series) on the EMF source, this can if done correctly change the quality of energy projected from the EMF source so that it no longer reverses the spin direction of your PW testing. The corrective item usually needs to be put directly on top of the electrical cord or on top of the appliance in some way for it to be effective; test and see where it can go that will create the correction you are looking for. Be sure to test after you put the correction on the line, don't assume it is working! See that it is working and that you are now testing strongly CW on PW when you are over the line, whereas before placing the correction you were testing strongly CCW (reversal on PW.)

There are various manufacturers of Vibrational Tools which make devices to put on EMF sources to change their vibrational effects; don't believe any claims made, test for yourself to see what really works for you.

Also be aware that the toxic radiation from the EMF source which the correction is transforming, can build up to the point that it overwhelms the corrective form, not only rendering it ineffective but also deeply imprinting the correction with toxic energy.

So be aware that you must regularly clear the correction you are using, so that this toxic imprinting does not build up. You can use any method described in the previous section, with the fastest and most powerful method being to shine the Eco-Laser directly onto the correction for a few seconds to clean it; this way you can leave the correction in place and not have to remove it for cleaning.

At this stage of your training, test to see if the item is toxically imprinted by testing yourself over it to see if you get a reversal on your Personal Wavelength; if normally you test strong over it, and now you test weak, it is imprinted with toxicity. When properly cleared, you will once again test strong over it.

In the next class in this series, the Universal Vibrational Spectrum, you will learn how to test for the specific vibrational qualities which indicate if the stone has become toxically imprinted; for now, use your Personal Wavelength skills.

In addition to the devices sold by various vibrational tool manufacturers to correct EMF, you can use high quality stones on the lines; but bear in mind not to use metal or other highly conductive materials on the EMF source to try to correct it. We recommend the Adaptogenic Stones described on our website and taught in our How to Use Crystals and Gemstones training, as they have very high levels of Centering Vibration. Our primary recommendation in terms of using Stones, would be to use the stone Mystic Merlinite right on top of the EMF source or power cord, which we stock on our website.

Of course always be safe, and never come into contact with any exposed wiring or electrical current!!! That is not required for vibrational corrections, just apply non-conductive materials of the right vibrational quality onto the body of the device or resting on top of the insulated power cord.

Be aware that vibrational corrections work on the subtle energy of the human energy field, and do not change anything you will find on an EMF meter; an EMF meter will not register any change, only vibrational testing methods (like Radiesthesia, Kinesiology, Pulse Diagnosis from Chinese Medicine or Indian Ayurveda) will.

NOTE 1: Be aware that persons who are energetically hypersensitive (including those with Electro-Magnetic sensitivity) may require more in-depth corrections of Earth Radiations or EMF than the average person will. Test the witnesses of these individuals to determine if the corrections are sufficient for them; you can do this by tuning to their PW over their witness, then putting the witness down on top of the corrected Geopathic Gridline or EMF source, and see if the PW spin stays strong CW, or reverses to CCW. If the CW spin weakens greatly or reverses to CCW, then try other corrections on the source to see what will be sufficient for this hypersensitive individual.

NOTE 2: Make sure your corrections are right on the pathway of energy of the Geopathic Gridline or EMF source. If you are off of the main current of its energy field, your correction may not be fully effective. Try adjusting the position of the correction to see if it becomes more effective in fully strengthening the person. You can also try multiple corrections together to see when the full strengthening effect is reached (especially with extremely energetically hypersensitive persons you may need multiple types of corrections on a single problem to fully strengthen them).

FOR MORE INFORMATION

The testing and correction of Earth Radiation and EMF sources is very important, and only touched on here very briefly in terms of testing with the Personal Wavelength method.

In the next class in this series The Universal Vibrational Spectrum we will go into more details on the Vibrational Testing and Balancing of these issues.

There are also excellent techniques and tools taught in the live BioGeometry® trainings, which address both Earth Radiation and EMF issues in powerful ways which you will not find in any other system or training offered today.

We highly recommend the BioGeometry® Foundation and Advanced training for everyone interested in these correcting these issues.

G) Basic Testing and Balancing of Living Beings other than Humans

Just as we can calibrate a Neutral Pendulum to test Personal Wavelength on a Human Being to identify what factors strengthen them or weaken them, so we can do the same things with ANY natural system, such as plants, animals, birds, and insects.

Below are some methods you can use to test for ways to support the life and health of all the elements of the ecosystems we live in.

1. Plants

Select a Plant in your house, or a Tree in your yard, which you would like to help. Calibrate to its Personal Wavelength, then test for items which may strengthen it further. Things to test may include fertilizer, compost, minerals, crystals, earthworms, sending beneficial energy from your hands (if trained in such methods) etc. You can also test to see if their items in its environment (appliances with Electro-Magnetic Fields in the house, or other things outside) which are weakening it, which you can move away from the plant or otherwise find ways to strengthen it in the face of this challenge.

2. Animals

You can use a pet for this, or a mammal living in your yard or your neighborhood you would like to help. Calibrate to its Personal Wavelength, then test for items which may strengthen it further. You can also test to see if there are items in its environment (appliances with Electro-Magnetic Fields in the house, or other things outside) which are weakening the animal, which you can then move away from the animal's living space, or otherwise find ways to strengthen the animal in the face of this challenge.

The same things can be done for Birds or Beneficial insects.

There are also many methods taught in the BioGeometry® training which can help energy balance these Beings and the environment.

VI. TESTING FOR DISTURBANCES AND THEIR FOCAL POINTS

In this section we describe the basic principles and methods for using Personal Wavelength testing to identify disturbances within the human body and energy field, and locate the focal points of those disturbances.

This will also include basic information on how to navigate through a person's energy system using Charts, which will then lead into detailed information on using specific types of Charts in the next several sections of this training.

A) Finding Where Disturbances are Located Using Personal Wavelength

Whereas our basic testing of an individual's Personal Wavelength showed us whether a particular material or vibration was weakening or strengthening to that person, this next method adds in an essential new skill. So the basic testing allows us to know how EXTERNAL materials and vibrations affect a person's entire general energy field.

Now we will use the Personal Wavelength of the person to test any part of their own physical anatomy or energy field, to see if that aspect of themselves is fully strong and balanced or if it is weakened, out of balance and in need of help.

So this more advanced testing allows us to know how separate INTERNAL systems within the person are functioning, and to determine the precise focal point of any internal disturbance.

Whereas our first type of testing is based on testing the overall energy field of a living being, our second type allows us to go deeper and investigate specific sub-components of the energy field (which may be specific body parts, or particular energetic systems.)

This method of testing using Personal Wavelength to determine the location of disturbances in sub-locations within a person's body or energy field was used by many French and European Medical Doctors in the first part of the 1900's, and is thus sometimes referred to as "French Medical Radiesthesia." We do not use the term "Medical" ourselves, and only mention this as a historical fact.

We do not make any medical claims for these techniques, they are based on historical usage and are for your information and personal exploration only.

B) Locations for Testing

In most cases this method involves testing one or more of the following component systems:

- a) A Physical organ or other single functional physical component in the body (such as Body Parts: eyes, ears, lungs, liver, etc.)
- b) Complex physiological systems which link together multiple organs or functional components in the body (such as the digestive tract, central nervous system, etc.)
- c) A Single Energy Center in the body: Chakra, Acupuncture Point etc.
- d) Complex Energy Systems which link together multiple energy centers and functions in the subtle body (such as the Central Energy Column of the body, or the Energy Meridians identified by Chinese Medicine.)

The advantage of this type of testing is that it allows us to balance specific out-of-balance aspects within the overall energy field, which is more targeted and effective than general energy field testing / application methods.

The disadvantage is that it takes more time and energy, so that for general testing of the efficacy of our Vibrational Corrections to Earth Lines, EMF etc. it is faster and easier to use testing on the overall energy field.

However for critical, core problems in a person's body or energy field you will get the best results by finding the specific epicenter of the problem -- the focal point of the disturbance -- and correcting it.

C) Linking to a Person's Energy System to Test Internal Disturbances

How to Energetically Link to a Person's Energy System

We can Access a Person's Energy Field to test any of the above listed component systems, by using one of the following means:

- 1) Using the actual physical body of a person, and then testing the organ or energy center. This could our own physical body, or the body of another person physically present with us.

This testing can be done by:

- a) Putting the Neutral Pendulum, with string length tuned to a person's Personal Wavelength, physically into the area of the body's energy field being tested (such as right over the Heart Chakra, for example, so the pendulum is itself within the tested area of the person's energy field).
- b) Standing in front of the person with Neutral Pendulum calibrated to their PW, and then point to, look at, put our attention on the area of their body being tested.
- c) Putting our attention on their body at the location of a body part, or putting our attention inside their body at the location of the organ, energy center etc.

2) Using a Witness of the Person to test on. In this case, we don't need to have their physical body in front of us, so distance work is possible for this method. It is also generally easier to use this method for prolonged testing sessions, rather than testing over our hand (for ourselves) or having them physically in front of us (for another person).

For this method we have the person's witness beneath our dowsing hand, which holds a Neutral Pendulum calibrated to their Personal Wavelength; the calibrated Neutral Pendulum then naturally swings strongly clockwise over the witness.

When testing with a Witness for Internal Disturbances, we usually navigate through their energy system through the use of accurately drawn Charts.

TIP: Always remember that for all Vibrational Radiesthesia methods our Attention must always be focused on the thing we are testing! Our attention is the key thing, whether we are testing right in the energy field of the person on the area of interest, or pointing to the specific area, or looking at it, or just placing attention on the area being tested (which could be non-visible, inside the body).

D) How to Navigate through the Components of a Person's Energy System

- 1) Through attention on that area of their body or energy system within their body -- usually with them right in front of you.
- 2) Through using Accurately Drawn Charts of Body Parts or Energy Systems

Charts may be Physical Body Anatomy Charts, or Charts of Subtle Body Structures.

The most common method is testing with our dowsing hand holding a Pendulum tuned to the PW of a person's witness, and the non-dowsing hand pointing to locations on a chart. Again this can be done for ourselves, or for another person; in the latter case, this allows us to navigate through their energy system without having them right in front of us. This also allows you to work at a distance at a time and place of your own choosing, and without the person having to be in front of you (where we often have to contend with their projecting their own thoughts and concerns into their energy field during the testing process, which can complicate matters).

A Key concept with the use of charts is Resonance of Shape: the Body Part, or the location of the Energy Center or Circuit within the overall body, must be accurately depicted; ie it must have the same shape shown on the Chart as the actual body area has. Then the shape of the area being tested on the chart matches ie, can go into resonance with the actual area of the person's body or energy field being linked to in testing.

Connecting to the body in front of you, or to the person's witness, links you to their particular energy system; connecting to the correct shape information in the chart links you to the part of their energy system you are wanting to test.

Only use accurately drawn diagrams, not photographs of persons or of body parts. Avoid medical textbooks showing body parts of cadavers: the photograph carries vibrations of the illnesses within that person and the decay of the dead body. Only use accurately drawn illustrations with the correct shape information.

For our current work, we will only be using the charts for testing purposes, not for applying corrections to the body onto the chart itself (we will apply the vibrations which we find are corrective, but these are applied to the person's energy field directly rather than by any action made onto the Chart itself.) However, we should mention that it is possible to apply corrections through the chart, and some systems do use this method. This is similar to systems which use 3-D models of the human body to energetically link to a person's energy field, and then they use tapping or other methods applied directly to the 3-D model to clear the person at a distance; a prominent example of this is the Tom Tam Healing System and its use of models in Tong Ren Healing.

When working with Charts it is important that when testing or applying corrections to the body directly through the Chart, that the Chart is kept energetically clear, as described in the next point below.

Whenever possible, use Charts which are Laminated in Plastic, not just plain paper. This is because it is very hard to clear Paper when it is deeply imprinted with toxic energies, but if the paper of the chart is laminated then it can easily be cleaned with a wet cloth or by running it under water (you can't use water on paper directly without ruining it).

Be aware that just as you are making a link to a person's energy field through the use of their witness in testing (described in the earlier section on the importance of keeping person's witnesses separate from other energies), so you are linking the Chart to a person's energy field through the testing process. This means that if you want to use the Chart for multiple people and you will that the Chart may have to be cleared from time to time.

Just as we described earlier that most energy workers today are not aware of how to properly protect their Witnesses, the same is true of most not being aware of the necessary basic energy hygiene with their testing charts. For example, the great Naturopath Hannah Kroeger taught her students to apply energetic corrections to an anatomy chart linked to a person they were working on. At first they used simple paper charts, until a range of bizarre energetic problems began to develop from this method. Kroeger then realized the problem was the imprinting of the paper with detrimental energies from the methods being applied to them, and switched all of her students to using Laminated Charts instead (which can be easily cleared as described above).

E) How to Test Components of a Person's Energy System

TESTING ON A PERSON'S BODY

This method can be used if the person is physically present in the room with you.

STEP 1: Have the person remove any energetic balancing jewelry or other materials carried on their body. If you are testing yourself, remove your energy balancing tools you have on your body; however if you are testing another person and not yourself, they should remove their items but you can keep yours on. We remove these so that we can get a clearer read on what is strengthening or weakening to the person, without interference from the energy balancing items worn on the body (which may cover up subtle disturbances in their energy field which we can find when these items are removed).

STEP 2: Ask the person to hold out either of their hands, then hold the Neutral Pendulum over the back of their hand. Calibrate the string length of a Neutral Pendulum so that it captures their Personal Wavelength, ie the string length where you feel the PULL into the strongest Clockwise rotation of the pendulum. Once you have their PW, ask them to turn their hand over so you are testing over their palm. The pendulum should continue to go clockwise over their palm just as it did over the back of their hand, showing that you calibrated correctly for the PW of their entire energy field and not for Polarity (which would have created a reversal of spin when testing the two sides of their hand, as described earlier).

STEP 3: Then while testing on the person's PW (either continuing to test over the back of their hand, or keeping the string length and just having attention on their energy field) then connect energetically to a specific place in their energy field which you want to focus your testing on. This can be an organ, chakra, body part etc.

Ways to connect to the specific sub-component of their energy field include:

- a) Touch the area with the non-dowsing hand (for instance, touch their Crown Center, or Third Eye Center etc.), or
- b) Point to the area with the non-dowsing hand, or
- c) Look at the area, or
- d) Put your pure awareness on the area (without touching, pointing, or looking.)

TIP: For any of these methods, it is essential that your awareness is going to the location. For example when you point towards their Liver, your awareness must go inside their body into their Liver itself.

STEP 4: Connect energetically to the component of their energy system, to see what the response is on the Pendulum tuned into their PW.

The result we get on the Neutral Pendulum shows us if that component (body part, chakra etc.) is fully as strong as the person's overall energy field. If the sub-component of their energy system / body part is fully as strong as the person's overall energy field, then the pendulum stays the same CW spin strength over their witness when connecting to the body part.

If the sub-component we are testing:

* is stronger, then this will increase the CW spin of the Pendulum when connecting to the area

* is weaker, then this will decrease the CW spin of the Pendulum

* is very out of balance, then the Pendulum will switch to CCW rotation; the faster the CCW rotation then the more out of balance the body part is.

STEP 5: If we find that a particular body area is weaker than the general energy field (as shown in the PW testing), then we can test what energy qualities / materials will balance the problem area. This can take different forms:

a) Have them hold an item (food, supplement, energetic tool, etc.), or do a particular energetic practice, and see how it affects their PW.

b) You hold or energetically connect to an item, or do an energetic practice for them, while you are testing and connected to their energy field by testing their PW, and see how the item or energetic practice affects their PW.

TIP: The above is the basic method of finding problems in the energy field and then finding what energy qualities will balance those problems.

This can be taken further by not only testing the strength or weakness of the sub-component of the energy field (organ, chakra etc.) in general and then finding what will balance it; we can also have the person be exposed to a type of challenge which weakens that sub-component of their body (which may test okay in normal circumstances) and see what will strengthen that area when they are exposed to that challenge.

The challenge could be having them stand on an uncorrected Earth Energy Line, being in an uncorrected EMF, holding a food which they have a weak allergy to, etc.

Then you can find the Vibration (by testing various supplements, energetic practices, etc.) which keeps that sub-component of their energy field strong when they are exposed to that challenge. This has many uses, and is a great technique! For example, you can find what may help a person who is exposed to high levels of EMF in their job and can't avoid it, etc.

TESTING ON A WITNESS OF THE PERSON

STEP 1: Hold your Neutral Pendulum over their Witness, and locate their PW by calibrating the string length for maximum CW spin over the Witness. This can be done either for yourself, or for another person. If it is for yourself, take off your energetic jewelry or other tools on your body to make it easier to find subtle disturbances within your energy field. If you are testing another person's witness, then you can keep your energetic tools on.

STEP 2: Connect energetically to the area of the body component of their energy field you want to test, while continuing to hold the calibrated Neutral Pendulum over their witness: see the response on their PW when you connect to the specific body area you are testing. This energetic connection to the body part area can be created a variety of ways:

- a) If using a photograph of the person, touch the area on the body in the photo with the non-dowsing hand (for instance, touch their Crown Center, or Third Eye Center, or body part to be tested, etc.) or put your attention on that part of their body.
- b) Use an anatomy chart drawing (this is the method used in Classical French Radiesthesia, in what they referred to historically as Medical Radiesthesia) and touch, look at, energetically connect to the area you are wanting to test on the anatomy chart. You can also use Charts of the Subtle Body and Human Energy System, if these are correctly drawn with the right shape information. The primary method (and the one used by the French Radiesthesiasts) is to hold a wooden pointer's tip onto the place on the Chart you are testing, to help keep your attention focused on that area (and to connect to the actual shape information of that area).
- c) Connect directly with your awareness to that part of their body; this requires a strong focused attention, and the mind must not wander.

As always, your attention must remain focused on the area being tested, whatever method you are using!

STEP 3: When you connect energetically to the body part, component of their energy system, see what the response is on the Pendulum tuned into their PW.

The result we get on the Neutral Pendulum shows us whether or not that body part / component of the energy field is fully as strong as the person's overall energy field (which is what we have calibrated the Neutral Pendulum to, over their witness; if the component of their energy system / body part is fully as strong as the person's overall energy field, then the pendulum stays the same CW spin strength over their witness when connecting to the area), or else the movement of the calibrated Neutral Pendulum will show if the sub-component we are testing:

- * is stronger than the overall energy field (increases CW spin of the Pendulum) or
- * is weaker than the overall energy field (decreases CW spin of the Pendulum) or

* is very out of balance (Pendulum switches to CCW rotation, the faster the CCW rotation then the more out of balance the body part / sub-component of the energy system is).

STEP 4: If we find that a particular body area is weaker than the general energy field (as shown in the PW testing), then we can test what energy qualities will energy balance the problem area.

To do this we - * touch,

- * hold or
- * energetically connect to an item, (or to an energetic practice) while we are connected to the person's energy field by testing their PW; we then see from the Pendulum's movement how the item or energetic practice affects their PW.

Continue until you find the item, substance, or practice which brings that sub-component of the energy field up to full Clockwise spin of the calibrated Neutral pendulum over their Witness, while we also connect energetically to the weakened sub-component / body part.

You have now identified what will energy balance the affected area.

F) Methods of Balancing the Disturbances Found in these Practices

For any methods of testing Components of the Body or Energy Field, and for all of the methods of testing on Charts which we are about to teach you in this course, you will need to find a way to balance the disturbances which you find in your testing.

If we find there is a problem (slowing of CW spin, or creation of a CCW spin on the Neutral pendulum calibrated to a person's Personal Wavelength) when we connect to a sub-component of the field, then we know that specific sub-component (organ, chakra etc.) needs energetic balancing.

We then continue to test with the Neutral Pendulum over the person's witness (calibrated for their PW), while also staying connected with our attention to the sub-component we are testing (the organ, chakra etc. which is making the Neutral Pendulum slow down or reverse direction over the person's Witness).

Then we test the energy fields of various things to see what will bring energetic balance into that subcomponent.

We basically add the thing we are testing for possible correction to the "circuit" we have created between the person's witness and the shape information of what we are testing on the Chart (organ, chakra etc.) So that now the witness, chart, and item being tested for correction are vibrationally linked together into an energetic circuit.

We can connect the item being tested for correctional effect to the circuit by putting out attention on it, while also staying connected to the witness and chart. We can reinforce this connection to the item we are testing by any of the different means we covered in the Advanced Polarity testing methods:

- a) Touching it
- b) Pointing at it
- c) Looking at it
- d) Putting our pure attention on it

When we link the vibrational quality of the right sample to the persons own energy field, then as we test the organ etc. in their body we will find that the spin of the Neutral Pendulum goes back to strong Clockwise over their Witness. We then know that this is what the person needs to correct that disturbed area we are testing on the anatomy chart.

You can start by putting your attention on a whole organ, body part etc. on the Chart for testing. Once you find a disturbance, then you want to find the exact Focal Point of the disturbance; in other words, not just somewhere in the brain but exactly in one part of the medulla, or not just the lower back but specifically at the left side of L2 (the second Lumbar vertebra).

One of the great benefits of testing on Charts is this ability to home in on the exact focal point of the disturbance. The more precisely you can determine exact focus of the problem in the body or energy field, the more accurately you can test for what will correct the problem.

The basic rule is: Corrections applied to the exact focal point of a disturbance are far more powerful and effective than corrections applied generally to a larger area of the body.

So when you are testing a correction for a problem area, be sure to keep your attention on the exact focal point of the disturbed area on the chart to see that this is corrected, not just the general larger area which has a disturbance.

TIP 1: Every person needs to be tested individually; a supplement, herb, essential oil, stone, vibrational tool, energetic practice etc. which balances one person's energy problem may not work for another. People are variable especially regarding what substances they are allergic to (if they are allergic to a substance, this will normally lead to a reversal of the Neutral Pendulum when testing PW for the person in connection to that item, as their energy field is weakened by, rejecting it).

TIP 2: Testing with Personal Wavelength for specific sub-components of the energy field is a fantastic technique, which can help alleviate a lot of suffering, and prevent wasting time on a lot of potential healing modalities which may NOT WORK for the person. You can see what substances they have a negative reaction to, those which they test okay for but are not fully corrective to particular imbalances in their energy field, and those which are both energetically compatible with them AND fully corrective for energy field imbalances.

For instance, in mainstream Medicine today there is NO type of testing a person energetically for:

- a) What substance will actually be most helpful for the person; instead this is basically guesswork based on intellectual suppositions on the part of the Doctor, and usually results in the writing of a prescription based on the hype for particular Drugs which have been promoted to Medical Doctors.
- b) Avoiding dangerous complications from Drugs or therapies which not only do not help the person, but they may in fact create strong allergic reactions (or be otherwise harmful) to the point of being life-threatening. In modern Medicine, Drugs are routinely prescribed with no energetic testing for compatibility; there is just a "wait to see" approach to whether a the person has a dangerous reaction to the Drug or not. This is a very energetically primitive approach, and causes huge amounts of needless suffering and medically induced death every year (admitted cases of accidental death due to "medical errors" including medication prescribed by doctors, are estimated to be over 100,000 a year in the U.S. alone).

Tragically, modern Medicine not only mocks energetic approaches, it actively persecutes them; Doctors who dare to use any energetic method are prosecuted and have their medical license taken away, and laypersons who make any medical claims for energetic work are subject to prosecution and imprisonment.

Again remember we do not, and you cannot, make any Medical claims for energetic work of any kind. We do not diagnose or treat any illness. These historical methods are for your information and personal exploration only, and you take full responsibility for any exploration which you do with them.

ENERGY CONGESTION VS. ENERGY DEPLETION

When we test a person's PW connection to an area on a Chart, the reversal of the CW spin to CCW indicates a disturbance in that area. However this does not indicate whether or not the disturbance is caused by the area being energetically congested (too much energy in a chaotic form, creating a blockage, the excess energy is often detrimental energy which needs to be removed) or energetically depleted (not enough energy in the area, creating weakness and susceptibility to invasion by pathogenic forces).

As a background consideration, if the area is congested with toxic energy then just energizing it will not solve the problem; the area will get even more congested with more energy added to the toxic tangled energy already lodged in the area. However extraction of toxic energy from the area will be very helpful in achieving balance.

On the other hand, if the area is depleted, than just extracting toxicity will not be sufficient; it will have to be significantly energized to bring it back up to full power.

Do keep the difference between these two conditions in mind in any energetic work you do. However for the purposes of our Personal Wavelength testing of Sub-components of a person's energy field, the testing of different corrections to see what will balance the problem will automatically take this into account.

We will look at these considerations further in the next two classes in this training series, as we advance into testing and differentiating specific qualities of vibration.

MATERIALS AND METHODS YOU CAN TEST VIBRATIONALLY TO CORRECT THE PROBLEM ON THE CHART

- * Crystals and Stones. These can be tremendously effective when used properly; however unfortunately many of the most important principles and applications cannot be found in popular books on the subject. See our How to Use Crystals and Gemstones live and online course for training in easy and effective applications.
- * Plants; this includes Essential Oils, Herbal Remedies, Plant salves applied to areas of the body, etc.

- * Foods.
- * Nutritional Supplements.
- * Homeopathic Medicines.
- * Vibrational Tools, either which project healing energies or which can be worn on the body.
- * Physical Practices: this includes Chiropractic, Rolfing, Massage Therapy, Tapping practices, Visceral Massage, etc.
- * Energetic Practices: this includes all types on energetic healing practices, including projecting specific vibrations from the hands into a person. There are a large number of methods taught today, including Reiki, Pranic Healing, Quantum Touch, etc. We will introduce a very precise method for such work in our last class in this series, Custom Vibrational Healing.
- * Spiritual Practices: Meditation, Prayer, Angelic healing, etc.

APPLYING THE VIBRATION WHICH CORRECTS THE DISTURBANCE

When you find what vibration will correct a problem you find on a Chart, then the next step is to apply that vibrational source (or do the healing practice) effectively to the person.

This may mean swallowing a physical substance, having a material applied to the skin on an area of the body, having energies projected to specific areas, etc.

If a person cannot receive a physical source of the vibration to swallow, apply topically, etc. then the alternative is to apply the vibration (through whatever means is practical) directly to their witness, so that it goes into their energy field.

Keep in mind that in the testing process, you found a Vibration which corrected a problem for that person when that Vibration is directly linked to the problem area. So you will get the best result when you apply the vibration so that it goes right to the focal point of the disturbed area, not just to the general area or the general energy field.

We will examine this issue in more detail in the next two classes in this series; for the moment, bear this principle in mind when applying the corrections.

Never assume you have applied the vibration correctly or sufficiently. It is quite possible that any healing method, including vibrational methods, will be beneficial but not sufficient, meaning that further work is needed. Don't assume the work is done when in fact it is not. Always after applying the correction to the focal point of the problem as best you can, re-test the person. If the correction worked, then now when you test the person's witness for PW while connecting to the place on the Chart that has the problem, that area should be as strong as the general PW and no longer give you a weaker CW spin, nor reverse to CCW. If either of the latter two reactions happens, this means the correction was not fully effective and more work will need to be done.

Also you need to give the correction time to settle in. Come back at least a day later and retest. Then several days later, then a week later etc. Be sure the area is staying corrected, and has not gone back to its unbalanced state.

It is quite possible that the vibrational correction will need to be reinforced regularly (ie, reapplied) for a period of time to permanently correct the problem, especially if the issue is deep-rooted and/or of long duration.

ESSENTIAL CLEARING METHODS AFTER TESTING

It is very important that you follow conscious energy hygiene practices anytime you do vibrational testing or healing of another person. You have to be sure that you do not pick up toxic energy in your own energy field from the people you are working on. This is a common problem for energy healers.

Remember that when toxic energy first enters into the periphery of your energy field, it is relatively easy to get it out. However once it penetrates into the physical body, and especially once it roots in or distorts the actual physical body structure (becomes physically visible in its effects) it will take much more energy to remove it, and more time for the body to heal itself after the toxic vibrations are removed.

Here are some basic methods for clearing yourself after testing disturbed or toxic areas of other people's bodies or energy fields.

- * Extracting and Depositing toxic energy into salt water bowl- pour the toxic water out after each session and flush down the toilet, rinse bowl and refill it with water and salt for next session.
- * Spray the hands with Ananda spray or other Essential Oil clearing spray when you feel your hands get toxic; also spray over your entire body from time to time to keep clear.
- * Washing the hands, forehead and back of neck until you have time for a full body shower. If taking a bath instead of a shower, you do not have the advantage of the running water, so help the still water clear your field by adding high quality clearing essential oils to the bath water such as Frankincense or preferably Sacred Frankincense.
- * Drink lots of pure water.
- * Eat cleansing foods, such as super green foods which take toxins out of the body. Includes clean sources of Spirulina, Chlorella, edible greens, etc.

VII. ANATOMY CHART TESTING

In the last section, we covered the basic concepts and techniques regarding testing components of the physical body or energy field, and finding corrections for problems you discover.

Now we will go into detail on our first method of Chart testing: the use of Physical Anatomy Charts.

A) Background: French “Medical Radiesthesia”

For practical purposes, testing on Anatomy Charts is a way to determine what areas of a person’s body are energetically impaired and require energy balancing.

The use of properly drawn anatomical charts was a major component of the “Medical Radiesthesia” used by hundreds of French and European Medical Doctors in the early 1900’s. Medical Doctors who use this technique today tend to not make their use of this technique public knowledge, because it, of course, is not accepted under the paradigms of modern Western Medicine, and they would be attacked for using any type of vibrational techniques or energetic healing whatsoever.

The term “Medical Radiesthesia” is the historical term used by the European Medical Doctors who employed this method, and not a claim of any kind by us. Once again, we do not make any medical claims whatsoever for this work, it is purely for historical information and for your personal exploration.

We simply refer to this method as Vibrational Testing.

Anatomy Charts allow us to navigate through the energy field of the person we are testing, which has several advantages:

1. It allows us to connect to the correct Shape information of the body parts or components of the energy field, which is a very stable and accurate form of vibrational testing when done correctly.
2. It allows us to remain focused on the proper area, without requiring as high a level of focus as it would if we were connecting to the body area through our awareness alone. We of course still need to connect to whatever area we are testing with our awareness, however this is easier when we have the correct shape of the body area to stay focused on in front of us.
3. We can find the exact focal point (epicenter) of the energetic disturbance in the body, by testing specific locations within an Organ, Gland, etc. The more precise our identification of the place of strongest disturbance, the more we can focus on this area to make sure we are correcting it. The best balancing will come from correcting the most out-of-balance location (the same principle is true regarding corrections made to locations, such as working on Earth Radiation or EMF sources.)
4. We can explore micro-details of the body or energy field, provided we have properly drawn illustrations of that area. This means that we can explore into smaller systems within the skin, organs, etc., or even go down to the DNA level to find problems and make energetic corrections.

NOTE: Never use medical photographs of dead bodies or body parts; these carry the vibrational information of the dead body. Always use accurately drawn illustrations of the body. Remember the discussion earlier in this course about the desirability of using laminated charts, rather than just paper charts; however you may use paper charts if needed for testing specific issues you cannot find depicted on a laminated chart, but if you are going to repeatedly use the paper chart then you should get it laminated for easy vibrational clearing of the chart.

Remember that this is a vibrational method, with resonance between the shape of the organ drawing, and the organ in the person's body.

When you understand this concept clearly, then you will also understand that you have to connect to the actual shape of the organ (or subtle energy system when using other types of charts) for testing, and won't make the mistake of connecting just to the written name of the organ. Connecting to the written name of the organ would be mental dowsing, ie "dowsing through mental association" through using the name of the organ, rather than actually connecting vibrationally to the organ itself as we are doing in Vibrational Radiesthesia.

You can then hold, touch, or otherwise energetically connect to the item you want to test, to see how it affects the selected component of the person's energy field.

PENDULUM MOVEMENTS SHOW THE ENERGETIC CONDITION OF THE BODY PART

When we test with PW on a Person's witness, we are tuning into their particular energetic field. We then add in testing a specific component of their energy field on Anatomy Charts, which fine tunes our testing to connect specifically to a shape of a body part (or energy center) within the person.

The result we get on the Neutral Pendulum shows if that body part is fully as strong as the person's overall energy field.

If so, then the pendulum in this case will stay the same CW spin strength over their witness when connecting to the body part, or

- * if the body part is stronger than the overall energy field, then this increases CW spin of the Pendulum when connecting to the shape of the organ;
- * if the body part is weaker or partially blocked, then this decreases CW spin of the Pendulum;
- * if the body part is very weak or blocked, very out of balance, then the Pendulum switches to CCW rotation; the faster, larger the CCW rotation then the more out of balance the organ is.

START BY MAKING SURE YOU CAN VIBRATIONALLY DETECT KNOWN PROBLEMS IN THE BODY

Remember the principle of "Test things of a known vibrational quality first, before testing things of unknown vibrational quality" when you are first learning a new testing method.

This means when learning the Anatomy Chart method, to do your initial testing on an area of the Chart where you know that you (or the person you are testing) has a problem.

If you know you have an injury in the body, or a problem in an organ or body part, start by testing that area on the anatomy chart. You should be able to detect the problem on the anatomy chart when you connect to it; if you don't get a reaction on the pendulum that matches the true state of the body part, then you know that you are not making a real energetic testing connection to the person's body (ie, you are not yet successfully connecting through the person's witness to their body area which is depicted on the chart).

For example: If you can feel a problem in your back from sitting too long, test the muscle or vertebra (where you feel the pain) on the chart -- you should see a weakened CW spin, or a reversal to CCW. The same applies to areas of the body that you know have current injuries or other issues.

You must be able to accurately detect known problems in the body, before you can trust that you are able to detect unknown problems!

BE SURE YOU CAN DETECT A FULL RANGE OF REACTIONS

When learning to test on the Anatomy Charts, you want to be able to see a full range of reactions of the pendulum, strong CW, or weak CW, or reversing to weak or strong CCW, when testing different areas of the body.

If everything tests fantastic (strong CW spin) or tests horribly (strong CCW spin) then you cannot trust your testing.

You need to see different reactions on different body parts, to ensure you are testing correctly and are sensitive to subtle differences of energetic conditions.

Once you see that you can accurately detect known problems in the body, and can detect a wide range of pendulum reactions on different body areas, then you have the fundamental skills to go into full testing of the body.

Remember that what you learn in the practices of this training, is only teaching you How to Practice; it does not create skill in the techniques.

Only regular practice creates dependable skills in any vibrational testing or balancing work.

B) Step by Step Guide to Testing on Anatomy Charts

ITEMS NEEDED FOR THIS PRACTICE:

1. An Anatomy Chart (accurately drawn illustrations of body parts, not medical photographs; preferably Laminated).
2. A Pointer (French Radiesthesiasts used a wooden pointer: a small wooden skewer like you buy at the grocery store to put kabobs on, or that you find meats on at an oriental buffet, will also work fine. If you don't have either of these, just use a pencil or pen as your pointer, but be sure not to make any marks on the anatomy chart).
3. A Neutral Pendulum.
4. A Witness of the Person you are testing (yourself or another person).
5. A pen and paper, to write down the areas which you find are out of balance, the corrections which appeared to work for them, and any areas still not fully balanced at the end of your session which you will need to return to in the future.
6. A variety of samples to test for possibly balancing the problem area. See the discussion of items which you could test for balancing effects and their application, in the previous section of this training. This could be anything which may be used to heal or strengthen the area, for example:
 - * Supplements (Vitamins, Minerals, Herbs, etc.)
 - * Essential Oils (Therapeutic Grade)
 - * Foods
 - * Vibrational Healing Tools with different vibrations
 - * etc.

STEP-BY-STEP INSTRUCTIONS

- * Do basic exercises to clear your energy field and to attain a Clear Mind state before beginning.
- * Drink pure water before beginning.
- * Touch the tip of your tongue to the roof of the mouth during testing, to help your energy flow.
- * Say a prayer for Divine Guidance and Assistance in your testing and energy balancing work for yourself and for the person you are working on.

* If you are working on yourself, remove any vibrational jewelry or tools you have on your body so as not to obscure the testing of your energy system. If you are testing for another person, then it is fine to leave on your vibrational items.

STEP 1: Calibrate the string length of the Neutral Pendulum over the person's Witness for their Personal Wavelength (the string length where you feel the "pull" for maximum clockwise spin of the pendulum over the witness.)

STEP 2: Then test on the Anatomy chart with the hand that is not holding the pendulum (the non-dowsing hand.) Hold a Pointer in the non-dowsing hand, to touch the specific shapes of the body on the Anatomy Charts which you want to test. Remember to always focus on and touch the actual drawn SHAPE of the body part, not the written name of the body part. If you already know what general area of the body has a problem (the person complains of stomach problems, or a neck issue, etc.) then of course start testing there. Otherwise, start testing on various key organs and systems on the Anatomy chart to find problem areas.

STEP 3: When the non-dowsing hand puts the pointer onto a shape of a body part on the Anatomy Chart which has no issues, then the Neutral Pendulum held over the witness will continue to swing Clockwise as strongly as it does when just testing the person's general PW.

However if the pointer is touched to the shape of a body part which does have energy imbalances, then as described earlier the Pendulum over the Witness will either slow down its Clockwise movement (if the body part is slightly weakened) or will slow down its CW movement to the point that it goes into back and forth Search Position and then goes into Counterclockwise movement (CCW movement shows serious problems; the stronger the CCW spin, the more severe the imbalance in the body part.)

STEP 4: Now that you have found the body part / organ which has a serious imbalance, move your pointer to slowly explore the area of that specific body part to see where the imbalance is the STRONGEST (this will be the area which creates the most slowdown of the CW spin, or which creates the strongest CCW spin, of the Pendulum over the Witness when you touch that precise location within the body part with your Pointer.)

You have now determined the focal point (epicenter) of the most serious imbalance within that body part, and are ready to look for what will energy balance that problem.

STEP 5: While continuing to connect energetically with the anatomy chart picture of the energetically imbalanced area and also to the Pendulum over the Witness (which is now going either slowly Clockwise or going Counterclockwise due to the effect of touching the impaired body part on the Anatomy Chart) then start testing your samples of possible energy qualities which will balance the location.

Focus on one sample at a time, linking the vibration of the sample into the circuit you have established between the Anatomy Chart picture and the Pendulum testing over the Witness; all three are then energetically linked, and are being tested together.

If you are testing an energetic practice to see if it will be corrective, this can be done two ways:

- a) Have the person do the energetic practice you want to test (yoga, chi kung, hands-on healing technique, etc.) If it is another person, test the problem area on the chart while they do the practice to see if it corrects the issue as shown by the pendulum movement. If it is you, test again on the chart as soon as you are done with the practice to see if it had a corrective effect.
- b) Do the practice in mind, and imprint the energy of that practice as you are doing it into a piece of paper, making a Imprinted Vibrational Witness. Then test the Imprinted Vibrational Witness as your sample in the circuit with the person's witness and the location on the anatomy chart, to see if it is corrective.

When you find a sample which is corrective, it will either partially or fully correct the spin of the Pendulum over the Witness. For example if the place on the Anatomy Chart makes the Pendulum go strongly Counterclockwise, a partially corrective sample will make the Pendulum go less strongly Counterclockwise or bring it back into a weak Clockwise spin; whereas a fully corrective sample will bring the Pendulum back into a fully strong Clockwise spin (as strong as the PW normally is when you are not connecting to the weakened body part).

You have now found the substance/practice with the vibrational effect needed to balance the problem area on the Anatomy Chart.

If you do not find anything which will completely restore the area to a full CW spin when tested with PW, make sure you make a note of this to come back to it later until the correction is found!

STEP 6: Administer the source that you found has the needed energy quality(s) to the person. This can be done 2 Primary ways:

* Direct application of the material to the body. Supplements, Foods etc. can be swallowed. Essential oils can be applied to the body part, or swallowed in cases where that is possible (not all Essential oils can be taken internally!) Vibrational tools can be worn, or their vibrational emission directed to the body part, or otherwise used as intended on the relevant parts of the body.

* Energetic linking of the energy quality to the person, either directly to their body or at a distance through their Witness. We connect the vibration of the energy qualities to the person's witness, and also to the picture of the organ/body part on the Anatomy Chart so that the energy qualities go to that area specifically.

Keep this "circuit" of energetic sample / witness / anatomy chart of body area all connected together with your awareness, until you see a strong Clockwise spin restored to the witness when linked to the picture of the relevant body part.

We will from this point forward refer to this connection of the sample, witness, anatomy chart as a "testing circuit."

* If it is an energetic practice, then either you or the person will perform the needed energetic practice to get the balancing effect.

Be aware that you will either need to follow up with further testing correction for the person (re-test, reconnect them to the needed energy qualities from time to time to stabilize the correction), or you will need to show them what to do so they can keep applying the needed vibrational source for themselves.

STEP 7: Always write down what areas of person's body you found were out of balance, and what you found to correct the issue for that person. This is very important information to track over time, and will allow you to make further key observations about things that are harming or may help the person as your information builds up over time.

STEP 8: After any testing session, dump any toxicity you feel in your body into the Salt Water Bowl.

* Spray your hands with Ananda or other Essential Oil Spray or wash your hands thoroughly.

* Take a shower or bath when possible.

* Drink pure water.

* Remember to wet wipe or wash off the Anatomy Chart to keep it clear.

* Store the Person's Witness in Graph paper so it is not affected by other energies around it, if you are going to keep it for further use; if you want to dispose of it, do so by burning it with the intention of clearing the persons entire energy field with the fire, with no harm to the person.

Remember to do this Anatomy Chart testing method for yourself on a regular basis, especially if you are working on other sick people. This way you will find disturbances which may be coming into your energy field from toxic energies you came into contact with, and remove these before they move deeper into your field. When detrimental vibrations first enter the energy field, they are relatively easy to remove; once they move deeper into the body, they are quite difficult to remove, especially if they nest in a body part and start to change actual physical structures in the body.

Test yourself at a minimum at least once a week!

NOTE: Remember these methods are for exploratory purposes only; we make no medical claims for them.

You assume all responsibility for your use of these methods.

Always follow the advice of the health care professional you trust, and never put yourself or another person in any danger.

Don't assume all your testing is accurate until you have done quite a bit of practice with the core techniques, over an extended period of time!

C) Testing Organs and Endocrine Glands

MAJOR ORGANS

Of course one of the most important areas to test are the Major Organs of the Body. These include:

- * Brain: On page 5 of your Laminated Anatomy Chart 1.
- * Heart: On page 3 of your Laminated Anatomy Chart 1.
- * Lungs: On page 4 of your Laminated Anatomy Chart 1.
- * Stomach: On page 4 of your Laminated Anatomy Chart 1.
- * Kidneys: On page 4 of your Laminated Anatomy Chart 1.
- * Liver: On page 4 of your Laminated Anatomy Chart 1.
- * Spleen: On page 4 of your Laminated Anatomy Chart 1.

ENDOCRINE GLANDS

Be sure to include testing of the Endocrine system; this is equally as important as testing the major organs, but is unfortunately often overlooked!

Below is a list of Endocrine Glands and some of their functions, arranged according to where you will find them located on your Anatomy Chart.

Head and Neck Area:

- * production of sperm cells and the male sex hormone testosterone.

NOTE: There are more views available of these areas in your Laminated Anatomy Chart 2.

D) Testing the Spine and Individual Vertebra

It is critically important to test the entire spine during your work with the Anatomy Chart. Include spinal testing in every session.

Of particular interest is testing each Vertebra separately to see which ones have issues.

In the important book Tom Tam Healing System by Chinese Medicine expert Tom Tam, he discusses his research into how blockages to the energy flow of specific vertebra is a root cause of many serious illnesses, including Cancer in various organs of the body. He claims a remarkable record of healing Stage 4 cancer and other “incurable” illnesses, by clearing the blockages to specific vertebra which supply energy and nerve connections to the sick organ. To see his full system, including the Acupuncture Points he uses in collaboration with clearing specific vertebra, please reference the book above (available from Vesica.) To see his method of clearing the blockages in the spine and acupuncture points from a distance by tapping on these locations on a 3-D Acupuncture Model of the Human Body which is energetically linked to a specific person, see his book Tong Ren Healing or the easy-to-use book by his student Rick Kuethe entitled Tong Ren Therapy (both available from Vesica.)

The information below is taken from the Tom Tam Healing System book. On the left hand side is the specific Vertebra, and the areas of the body which Tam found are disturbed if the energy flow from that Vertebra is blocked. Note that for some Vertebra he notes that the blockage is on the Left (L) or Right (R) side of the Vertebra, and which body part is linked to each side.

On the right side of the list below, he gives some basic body connections taught in Chiropractic texts for the same Vertebra.

It is very worthwhile to test each Vertebra listed below during your Anatomy Chart PW testing for a person, and to be sure to clear the Vertebra if you find in your testing that it tests for weak CW or reverses to CCW, making sure to restore it to full CW spin in the PW testing. This may either help the person to avoid problems in the body areas linked to that Vertebra, or to help current issues that they have in those body areas (which will test as weak CW or reverse to CCW when tested for the person on the Anatomy Charts, and may in some cases be restored to full CW when the Vertebra is cleared.)

You can experiment with using the Tong Ren method taught in the books listed above, for clearing problems you find when testing these Vertebra, or use other methods.

E) Testing For Possible Reactions to Substances & Vibrations

The French Medical Doctors who used Radiesthesia in the 1900's would commonly test people for which foods, supplements, etc. they may have hidden allergies to.

Today it has become commonplace for health-minded individuals to have found in their own lives that when they identify the foods they have allergic reactions to and remove these from their diet, their health immediately improves.

For this, simply test different common foods the person eats against their Witness using their Personal Wavelength. Foods (common allergens) to be sure to test (if the person includes them in their diet) include:

- * Corn
- * Dairy Products
- * Wheat Gluten
- * Refined Sugar
- * Artificial Sweeteners
- * Alcohol

Also if the person does not eat an organic diet, test them for their reaction to pesticide-laden fruits and vegetables they eat, hormone and antibiotic laden meats, and genetically engineered foods.

Testing against a Person's Witness by itself is a general test. If you want to be more specific, you can test the reaction of their Stomach to the food, or their Liver (especially in the case of alcohol), etc. using the Anatomy Chart.

Also be aware that a person may theoretically have reactions to any substance, or any vibrational field, not just food per se.

F) Testing Specific Qualities Needed of a Substance

In the first stages of learning Vibrational Radiesthesia, we evaluate whether or not a specific substance / energy quality is strengthening or weakening to a person's Personal Wavelength. As we develop greater skill and control over our Selective Awareness, we can start focusing on fine points, such as the exact amount of a substance or energy quality is optimal.

After testing for whether or not a person's Personal Wavelength is strengthened or weakened by a specific supplement, herb, food, pharmaceutical, etc. we can then test exactly how much of that item they need. Now instead of just testing the entire energy field of the item, we test the specific amount of that item.

For this, we need to shift our attention from just the general vibrational field of the item which is what we have been testing up until now to the specific quantity of the item, either amount of a material (such as a powder) or number of capsules, etc.

Be aware that different people will test vibrationally as requiring different amounts, based on body weight, background conditions in the body, and other factors.

As an example of testing quantity for the person's overall energy field: having found in testing general vibrational fields that a person does best with a specific brand of Vitamin E on the market, we then test with one pill of Vitamin E for strengthening or weakening with a Neutral Pendulum held over a person's Witness at the string-length for Personal Wavelength. If it is strengthening, we then test two pills: if it is weaker than when testing one pill then just stick to taking one pill at a time, whereas if it is slightly more strengthening with two then go on to test three. If three pills is a weaker reading than two pills, then the person will take two pills at a time, whereas if they test stronger with three pills then go on to test four pills, etc.

This same method can be easily adapted for testing specific components in the body or energy field. Instead of just testing the effect on the whole field, connect to a particular body part that you are taking the substance for, while also testing on the Witness and connecting the substance to this testing circuit; for example, test the Liver if you are taking Milk Thistle to help that organ. Then see the amount of milk thistle that the person tests as needing in that session.

IMPORTANT CAUTIONS

Remember that we make no medical claims for this work, it is for information purposes and your personal exploration. You assume all responsibility for your explorations. You cannot diagnose or treat any illness based on vibrational testing.

Don't take high dosages of any potentially toxic material! Stay within the recommended dosages listed on the label of the supplement bottle, etc.

In cases where you find a person needs more of a specific item than a Doctor has prescribed, be sure that the Doctor's directions are followed. Never interfere with a Doctor's care with your explorations.

See the upcoming sections on vibrational testing of side effects, limits of the digestive system, and combining substances.

G) Testing the Limits of the Digestive System

Many medicinals are taken orally, meaning that they have to be processed through the person's stomach and digestive system. It is quite possible that you may find that a person needs some form of oral supplement or medication in a quantity which is good for the intended body area, but which puts the stomach and/or intestines out of balance (note that "stomach upset" is very often listed as a side effect of many medications).

Test a Person's Witness using their Personal Wavelength on an Anatomy Chart while adding the substance into the testing circuit, to see how the amount of a particular substance they need to take orally will affect their Stomach, Small Intestine, and Large Intestine. If you find that the needed quantity of the substance puts any part of the digestive tract out of balance, test for what energy quality will keep that part of the digestive tract strong when digesting that substance. For example, this may be some type of herb, or digestive enzymes, or probiotics, etc.

If you cannot find a source for the vibration which will keep the digestive tract testing strong when processing the needed quantity of the necessary substance, then test to see how much of the substance the Stomach, Large Intestine, and Small Intestine can process while staying strong; the person can then take orally that amount.

Then look for an alternative way to give the energy quality of the excess amount of the substance to needed body area; this may be a transdermal application (through the skin, as with magnesium oil), or it can be applied through energetic linkage to the person's energy field. In the latter case, connect the material vibration to the person's witness with one's attention and observing when the Pendulum shows a full Clockwise spin restored for the body part in question; remember this type of vibrational linkage will often need to be reinforced, and not just done once.

You can also see if you can divide up the amount of the substance needed into smaller increments taken over time, so that the digestive tract is not overwhelmed with a huge quantity at one time.

IMPORTANT NOTE: In cases where a Doctor has prescribed a specific dosage of a medicine, it is important that the patient take the ENTIRE DOSAGE ORALLY in the schedule given by the Doctor; in this case you can focus your work on finding energy qualities that will strengthen the digestive tract, don't reduce the quantity the person takes. Be sure that anything taken with the medicine does not go against a Doctor's guidance regarding things which can be taken at the same time as the medicine, ie is not antagonistic to the medicine.

Remember to never interfere with a Doctor's prescriptions or guidance.

H) TESTING FOR SIDE EFFECTS

Just as we tested the Stomach for how it responded to items to be taken orally in the previous section, so we can test other Body Areas for how they are affected by substances taken into the Body. In addition to the Digestive Tract, other areas to test for possible Side Effects include:

- * Brain
- * Liver
- * Heart
- * Kidneys
- * Spleen
- * Thymus Gland
- * Thyroid Gland
- * Ovaries (for women)
- * Testicles and Prostate (for men)

If the substance is prescribed by a Doctor, or otherwise essential to take, then you can explore testing for what Energy Qualities will help to balance the Side Effect you found in a particular area of the Body, but make sure this in no way interferes with the prescription!

I) Testing the Effects of Combined Substances or Vibrations

After testing a variety of different energy qualities which a person needs, it is then essential to test how well these qualities combine if applied together to the person. They may test well in isolation, but there may be conflicts between them if applied together, so it is vital to test them together if they are going to be applied together!

In some cases you will find that in combination they may slightly weaken the person, or may severely weaken the person. If the group of energy qualities do not test well, then start taking out components of the group one at a time, to see which items are causing the problem; at some point you will find the remaining items working together well, so that the person stays strong when taking them as a group.

The Person can take the item(s) that did not belong in that group at a different time of day, so that the items are not processed internally at the same time.

In any case where you are testing a person for whether or not items like supplements they are taking are strengthening or weakening them, test each item:

- * individually for its affect on them AND
- * also test all the supplements they take at the same time together as a set, to see what the effect is when taken as a group.

When items that test well separately test poorly when tested together, showing they need to be taken at different times and not combined, this reveals detrimental interactions between the vibrations of the supplements or materials. For example, some herbs have completely opposite qualities (warming vs. cooling) and are known in classical herbology as not to be mixed together, whereas other herbs combine beautifully.

VIII. CHAKRAS AND CENTRAL COLUMN TESTING

A) Vibrational Principles of Testing the Chakras and Central Column

Having learned how to test for Focal Points of Disturbances in the Physical Body using Anatomy Charts, we now test major energy centers (Chakras) and subtle energy flows (Central Column, Ida, Pingala, and Sushumna Channels.)

The basic principles and methods of testing for the Chakras and Central Column are the same as for testing on the Anatomy, so be certain you have learned the information and techniques in that section to apply to testing on Chakras and the Central Column.

The essentials are of course the same:

The Neutral Pendulum tests a Person's Personal Wavelength held over their Witness (either ourself or another person), while we point to locations on a chart which we want to test in that person's energy field.

Just as with Anatomy Chart testing, we take notes of locations which are out of balance, and look the epicenter of the disturbance within the tested area. Possible sources of vibrational corrections are tested which will restore the PW of the person in the out of balance areas to full strength CW spin.

There are two illustrations on the Test Chart for the Chakras and Central Column of Energy.

We will use this picture to test the 7 Major Chakras and the 3 Channels.

The longer illustration on the right side of the Chart is a Nepalese Tantric illustration showing not only the 7 chakras in the body, but also the chakras above the head which are part of the Central Column of Energy, as well as a chakra below the feet. We will use this picture to test the powerful esoteric chakras which are above and below the body, and to test the general flow of the Central Column of Energy.

B) General Chakra Testing Method

PREPARATION:

- * Do basic exercises to clear your energy field and to attain a Clear Mind state before beginning.
- * Drink pure water before beginning.
- * Touch the tip of your tongue to the roof of the mouth during testing, to help your energy flow.
- * Say a prayer for Divine Guidance and Assistance in your testing and energy balancing work for yourself and for the person you are working on.
- * If you are working on yourself, remove any vibrational jewelry or tools you have on your body so as not to obscure the testing of your energy system. If you are testing for another person, then it is fine to leave on your vibrational items.

STEP 1: Calibrate the string length of the Neutral Pendulum over the person's Witness for their Personal Wavelength (the string length where you feel the "pull" for maximum clockwise spin of the pendulum over the witness.)

STEP 2: Then test on the Chakra chart with the hand that is not holding the pendulum (the non-dowsing hand.) You can hold a Pointer in the non-dowsing hand, or just use a finger, to touch the specific locations of the chakras which are placed on the outline of the human body.

STEP 3: When the non-dowsing hand puts the pointer or finger onto a Chakra which has no issues, then the Neutral Pendulum held over the witness will continue to spin Clockwise as strongly as it does when just testing the person's general PW.

However if the pointer is touched to a Chakra which does have energy imbalances, then the Pendulum over the Witness will either slow down its Clockwise movement if the Chakra is slightly impaired or will slow down its CW movement to the point that it goes into back and forth Search Position and then goes into Counterclockwise movement (CCW movement shows serious issues with the Chakra; the stronger the CCW spin, the more severe the imbalance in the Chakra.)

NOTE: When calibrated to a person's PW, what testing the Chakra shows is the strength and balance of the Chakra through the spin direction of the pendulum. It does NOT show the direction the Chakra is spinning. There are many popular texts that talk about the way their authors believe that specific chakras "should" spin. If you want to know what direction the person's Chakra is spinning, you would calibrate the Pendulum for Polarity to show you the spin direction. However that is not the practice we are doing here, we are only doing PW testing. Also what you would find in the Polarity testing of the Chakra is the dominant spin direction of the Chakra; Chakras naturally can have both directions of spin, for pulling energy in and for releasing toxic energy.

STEP 4: When you find a Chakra that has a serious imbalance, move your pointer to slowly explore the area of that specific Chakra to see where the imbalance is the STRONGEST (this will be the area which creates the most slowdown of the CW spin, or which creates the strongest CCW spin of the Pendulum over the Witness when you touch that precise location within the Chakra with your Pointer.)

You have now determined the focal point (epicenter) of the most serious imbalance within that Chakra, and are ready to look for what will energy balance that problem.

STEP 5: While continuing to connect energetically with the anatomy chart picture of the energetically imbalanced area and also to the Pendulum over the Witness (which is now going either slowly Clockwise or going Counterclockwise due to the effect of touching the impaired body part on the Anatomy Chart), then start testing your samples of possible energy qualities which will balance the location.

Focus on one sample at a time, linking the vibration of the sample into the circuit you have established between the Anatomy Chart picture and the Pendulum testing over the Witness; all three are then energetically linked, and are being tested together.

When you find a sample which is corrective, it will either partially or fully correct the spin of the Pendulum over the Witness.

If you do not find anything which will completely restore the area to a full CW spin when tested with PW, make sure you make a note of this to come back to it later until the correction is found.

Note that for the Chakras, any of the types of corrections described earlier can be tried. However also bear in mind testing different energetic practices to correct the Chakra; there are many not only in the Indian Yoga tradition, but in other traditions which can potentially correct a Chakra issue.

STEP 6: Administer the source that you found has the needed energy quality(s) to the person. This can be done 2 Primary ways:

Direct application to the body. Essential oils or a spray of oils can be applied to the Chakra, or Vibrational tools can be worn, or their vibrational emission directed to the Chakra, or an appropriate stone can be used to pull toxicity from the chakra and/or to energetically vitalize or balance the Chakra (as always, adaptogenic stones are highly recommended.) Hands-on energy healing practices on the chakra can be very effective, as can be different breathing practices from Hatha Yoga, etc.

Energetic linking of the energy quality to the person through their Witness. We connect the vibration of the energy qualities to the person's witness, and also to the picture of the organ/body part on the Anatomy Chart so that the energy qualities go to that area specifically. Keep this "circuit" of energetic sample, witness, anatomy chart of body area all connected together with your awareness, until you see a strong Clockwise spin restored to the witness when linked to the picture of the relevant Chakra.

Be aware that you will either need to follow up with further testing correction for the person (re-test, reconnect them to the needed energy qualities from time to time to stabilize the correction), or you will need to show them what to do so they can keep applying the needed vibrational source for themselves.

STEP 7: Always write down what Chakras you found were out of balance, and what you found to correct the issue for that person. This is very important information to track over time, and will allow you to make further key observations about things that are harming or may help the person as your information builds up over time.

STEP 8: After any testing session, dump any toxicity you feel in your body into the Salt Water Bowl.

- * Spray your hands with Ananda or other Essential Oil Spray or wash your hands thoroughly.
- * Take a shower or bath when possible.
- * Drink pure water.
- * Remember to wet wipe or wash off the Chakra Chart to keep it clear.
- * Store the Person's Witness in Graph paper so it is not affected by other energies around it, if you are going to keep it for further use; if you want to dispose of it, do so by burning it with the intention of clearing the persons entire energy field with the fire, with no harm to the person.

C) Testing the 7 Basic Chakras in the Body

The term “Chakra” is derived from the Sanskrit word for a “wheel” or “to turn.” Chakras are understood in many traditions as powerful vortices within the energy body, which absorb and distribute different vibrations of vital force throughout the human energy field. The Chakras supply and sustain the major endocrine glands and organs of the physical body; when the chakras are blocked, depleted, or congested then the body parts linked to them will suffer.

There are many major, minor, and mini chakras of the body. One useful guide to these is the collection The Chakras and Their Functions taken from the works of Master Choa Kok Sui, the founder of the modern Pranic Healing system. This book is currently out of print, and used copies are usually quite expensive; however a Kindle digital version of the book is currently available from Amazon for a much lower price than a used copy of the book.

We will now go through testing each of the 7 Major Chakras which reside in the human body, with indications of qualities of each chakra.

This method can of course be used either for yourself or for another person (using their witness in the latter case.)

If you are testing yourself, remember to take off any energetic things you are wearing before beginning the testing. Tune into the Chakra in your body, at the same time as you are connecting to it on the Chart. Feel the mirroring between what you feel with the Chakra in your body, with what the Pendulum shows during the testing on the Chart at that Chakra. When you apply possible Corrections to out of balance Chakras, feel the effect of that correction’s vibration on the Chakra in your body while testing it on your witness.

You can test the chakras beginning either at the top going downward (the Heavenly flow, from Crown to Base Chakra) or from the bottom upward (the Earthly flow, from Base Chakra to Crown Chakra.) Try both methods. For our beginning practice below, we will go from below upwards, the classical method from India (see the discussion of top down vs. bottom up methods of activating the Chakras in our Spiritual Science: Essential Teachings and Practices online class).

For the testing below, you will use the shorter illustration on the left hand side of your Chakra Chart.

STEP 1: Place your finger or pointer on the Basic Chakra: Muladhara.
Location: Base of the spine, coccyx area.

Functions: Energizes the entire physical body, affects body heat, vitality etc. Sometimes called the Root Chakra, it is the energetic foundation of physical existence.

Problems in the Chakra may manifest as: core emotional and psychological issues regarding survival, feeling ungrounded, prosperity issues, “spacy”, arthritis, spinal ailments, blood ailments, cancer, bone cancer, leukemia, allergy, growth problems, low vitality, slow healing of wounds, broken bones.

STEP 2: Place your finger or pointer on the Sex Chakra: Svadhishtana

Location: Genitals and pubic area.

Functions: Energizes and directs the functions of the sexual organs and the urinary bladder. Connected to core energy in the body, and how that energy is directed, along with integration of core energy with emotional and psychological health.

Problems in the Chakra may manifest as: Low Sexual Vitality or Excessive Sexual Drive, genital health issues, issues in expressing love and affection in a healthy way, sexual neuroses or pathologies, urination issues.

STEP 3: Place your finger or pointer on the Solar Plexus Chakra: Manipura

Location: At the Solar Plexus, directly beneath the base of the Centerline of the Ribcage.

Functions: Energizes and directs the functions of Liver, Stomach, Pancreas, Spleen, Large and Small Intestine. Connected to detoxification of blood. Major energy production center, along with the Base and Sex Chakras. The Solar Plexus center can be used to energize the entire body, however it is best to thoroughly purge toxic energy from the Solar Plexus center first to avoid energetic congestion which could cause digestive or breathing issues. Detrimental vibrations tend to gather at the solar plexus, many of them generated by our own negative emotional reactions.

Problems in the Chakra may manifest as: Digestive ailments, breathing issues, backache or stomachache, diabetes, ulcers, hepatitis, heart issues, rage issues, emotional instability, anger, hatred, violence, overheating of the body, inability to relax or to forgive others.

STEP 4: Place your finger or pointer on the Heart Chakra: Anahata

Functions: Energizes and directs the functions of the Heart, Thymus Gland, Circulatory System, Love, Compassion, Empathy.

Problems in the Chakra may manifest as: Heart issues (which are often linked to Solar Plexus issues), impairment of Thymus Gland, Blood circulation issues, “cold-hearted” or “hard-hearted”.

STEP 5: Place your finger or pointer on the Throat Chakra: Vishuddha
Location: Center of the Throat

Functions: Energizes and directs the functions of the Throat, Thyroid and Parathyroid Glands, Lymphatic System. Connected energetically to Sex Chakra; this is related to people with good voices and singers being considered to be sexually desirable (“Rock Stars.”)

Problems in the Chakra may manifest as: Throat and Voice problems of all kinds, difficulties breathing, inability to express oneself or fear of speaking.

STEP 6: Place your finger or pointer on the Third Eye Chakra: Ajna
Location: At the root of the nose, between the eyebrows.

Functions: Energizes and directs the functions of some areas of the brain (particularly in the frontal lobe), the eyes, sinuses, exerts some control over the other Chakras and Endocrine Glands in the body, activates perception of non-physical realities through images (clairvoyance).

Problems in the Chakra may manifest as: Endocrine Gland issues (which may need balancing of both the Chakra which immediately controls the Gland plus the Third Eye Chakra), mental illness, cognitive difficulties, inability to understand spiritual concepts or advance spiritually, erratic energy flows through entire body.

NOTE: There are actually a series of important Chakras in the human forehead. Slightly above the Third Eye Chakra is another center in the middle of the forehead, with another center higher up around the hairline. These are powerful centers of higher consciousness, about which very little information is available in public sources. They are considered secret Initiation teachings in multiple traditions. An easy approach to begin testing these locations is to move the pointer slowly above the Third Eye Center location on the Chart (actually this can be done on Anatomy Chart as well as on the Chakra Chart), testing as you go until you reach the hairline, and see if you find any points of reversal along that route.

STEP 7: Place your finger or pointer on the Crown Chakra: Sahasrara

Functions: Energizes and directs the functions of the brain and of the entire body. Connects us to states of higher consciousness and advanced spiritual evolution. Links the body to the Central Column of energy which extends above our heads and contains the higher non-physical Chakras.

Problems in the Chakra may manifest as: Loss of spiritual awareness and communication with higher Beings; may develop completely self-aggrandizing behaviour often involving the manipulation of other people. Cognitive problems; many different physical, psychological, or spiritual illnesses.

LINKING ANATOMY CHART TESTING TO CHAKRA TESTING

In addition to testing the 7 Chakras in sequence from bottom to top, or top to bottom, you can test the Chakras in coordination with your Anatomy Chart testing. For example, if you find problems with the Physical Heart when testing on the Anatomy Chart, you could then go directly to test the Heart Chakra and see if it also has a disturbance. If you make a correction to the Physical Heart does it help correct the Heart Chakra, or visa-versa? If you cannot find a complete correction for the Physical Heart, does balancing the Heart Chakra create balancing for the Physical Heart when direct applications for the Physical Heart cannot? Similarly, if there are Physical Throat issues, you can test the Throat Chakra; for Brain issues you can test the Third Eye and Crown Chakras, etc.

This is a very rich area for exploration, which will deepen even further when we add in testing the Energy Meridians later in this course.

TESTING & BALANCING CHAKRAS FOR SPECIFIC ISSUES

If you find a person has specific spiritual mental, emotional, energetic, or physical problems listed in the chakra functions list above, you can of course check the chakra associated with that problem in the list and find ways to balance it.

There are also general issues which can be greatly benefitted by balancing certain Chakras. Here are a couple of simple examples.

1. PROSPERITY ISSUES

If a person has lifetime issues with prosperity and basic sustenance, this is linked to weaknesses in the first 3 Chakras: Base, Sex, and Solar Plexus. Test these three, and find ways to strengthen them. Be aware that both physical and energetic exercises (chi kung, yoga etc.) can be of great help in strengthening chakra activity. Energy healing methods involving pulling toxicity out of these centers, and energizing them directly thereafter, can be extremely beneficial. Identifying and removing embedded beliefs a person has about Prosperity can also be very helpful.

2. HYPER-SENSITIVITY TO TOXIC VIBRATIONS OR CHAOTIC ENVIRONMENTS

I have tested a large number of people's energy fields who are hypersensitive to any toxic vibrations around them (Earth energy lines, EMF etc.) and who have great difficulty in any crowded chaotic environment (crowded event of any kind, busy airports, shopping malls, etc.); in virtually all cases they have a weakness of lower chakras in the body which need to be strengthened. The Base chakra is critical, as it also is the link to the energy channels running down the legs and into the Earth for literal grounding of the energy field, and connecting the entire human energy system into the solidity and power of the Earth itself (Earthly Chi, Earth Prana.) In Chinese Medicine this would be the area of the lower Dan Tien.

D) Testing the Chakras in the Central Column

As described in the Vesica online Spiritual Science courses, one of the advanced teachings of great spiritual traditions includes specific instructions on how to access and use the chakras above the head. These have extremely intense vibrations, and connect to higher consciousness states. They also connect to higher spiritual beings; these are depicted on the illustration on the right hand side of your Chakra testing page (which is from the Nepalese Tantric tradition) as Beings floating on clouds next to these higher centers.

These higher chakras are part of a great Column of energy which runs through the midline of the human body (from Crown to Perineum) and continues above the head, as well as between the legs and down into the Earth. This great vertical column is the primary energetic axis of the body, which suspends us between heaven and earth.

We can test these higher Chakras just as easily using the PW method, as we can the Chakras in the body or any anatomical part.

Later in this series of classes we will discuss how to detect the position of these higher centers of energy through testing specific energy qualities.

For now, simply use the longer diagram on your Chakra Chart to test at the positions of the multiple centers shown above the head. Each center increases in vibrational intensity, and connection to higher realms, as you go higher up the column.

You can also test the first Center below the feet, through testing the centers of the sphere shown beneath the feet of the standing figure.

The primary way to increase the strength and balance of these centers is through spiritual practices, including meditation and advanced energy circulation exercises.

E) Testing Left and Right Channels (Ida and Pingala)

In addition to the Chakras themselves, it is also possible to test the left and right channels of the body.

Use the picture on the left hand side of the Chakra Chart, and move the pointer along the vertical line of either the right hand (Pingala, Solar) or left hand (Ida, Lunar) channels shown there. Move the pointer along the entire length of the line of each channel when you are testing it.

The illustration is only a rough approximation of the Ida and Pingala channels, but good enough to get a sense of these two currents in the body and to experiment with. For testing purposes, do not use the part of the line that is outside of the body (shown in the area between head and shoulders), just the parts inside the body.

A few ideas to experiment with for balancing issues you find in either of the channels:

BREATHING POLARITY

A key exercise to balance these two channels in the body, is the “Alternate Nostril Breathing” practice of Indian Yoga. This involves a process of closing off one nostril at a time in a rhythmic breathing cycle, which has the effect of balancing the channels. Instructions can be found on the internet, as it is a very popular and well-known practice.

You could also experiment with simply sealing one nostril with your thumb and breathing in and out of the other nostril. Test the two Channels on the chart as you do so and see the effects of strengthening or weakening the two channels. What do you find?

OBJECT POLARITY

Another interesting experiment is to connect to something of a polarized energy and see how it affects the two Channels.

For example you could touch one polarity of a battery while you test yourself on the channels: does connecting to an external polarity affect your testing of them?

Or try using an Adaptogenic stone, preferably a Massage Wand form (a regular polished stone will also work) and test the ends for polarity (calibrating a pendulum for polarity on a battery, then testing the ends of the stone.) Touch one end of the stone to either the centerline of your body or one side of the body or the other, while testing on the Ida and Pingala channels; then try the other side of the stone to test the opposite polarity. Does this affect what you find when testing the Channels, and if so then how?

F) Using this Method to Activate Energy Centers

This class is focused primarily on developing skills in accurate Vibrational Testing using Personal Wavelength, which includes methods for determining the needed corrections for balancing energetic problem areas.

Another possible application of this work is to activate the Energy Centers we are testing.

Following the basic principle of “Energy follows Attention”, by placing our attention on the Chakras or the Central Column during testing we are already activating them to some degree.

This activation can be taken further through a variety of techniques.

One method is to practice directing vibrational energies to these areas

- 1) through natural substances such as stones, essential oils etc., or
- 2) through the use of energy emissions from vibrational tools, or
- 3) through emanations from the hands of an energy healer.

Another method is to use specific spiritual practices (involving the use of the mind and/or of energetic movements) within an Energy Center or the Central Column. See the Vesica trainings in Spiritual Science for details on these practices.

You can observe the results these practices have in balancing or activating these areas through testing with Personal Wavelength on the Chakra Chart.

NOTE: Bear in mind that in using Vibrational emanation methods to activate the Centers, that in many cases you will need to clear toxicity out of the area (purge) if the area is energetically congested, before using methods of charging the area.

IX. ENERGY MERIDIAN AND ACUPUNCTURE POINT TESTING

A) Testing Method 1: Meridians related to Anatomy Chart Problems

This is a relatively quick method of testing the Meridians. For this method, do your testing on the Anatomy Chart first.

Test for the following organs on the Anatomy, writing a list of any that test as being out of balance.

Heart
Small Intestine
Urinary Bladder Kidney
Gall Bladder (Next to Liver)
Liver
Lung
Large Intestine Stomach
Spleen

Then go to the Meridian Chart and test the Meridian associated with that organ. (Heart Meridian for the Heart, Liver Meridian for the Liver, etc.)

Start with the first point on the Meridian, and keep the tip of your wooden pointer on the flow pattern of the Meridian as you go from one Acupuncture Point to the next for that Meridian, until you reach the final Point. Write down any Point, or location in the flow of the Meridian between Points, where you have a slowdown of the spin of the Pendulum or a reversal to CCW spin.

See what you observe in your exploration, regarding any relationships between what you find in testing an organ and in testing its Energy Meridian.

Do problems in one appear in the other? Do problems in an organ correlate to a problem in the entire linked Meridian, or in a particular Point or Points? Or in the flow of the Meridian between Points? Do corrections applied to either the Organ or Meridian, affect the other system? Which appears more primary in your testing, Organ or Meridian, regarding which to correct first?

B) Testing Method 2: Complete Meridian Flow Pattern

This is the complete method of testing with the Personal Wavelength method, taking you through the 2 Midline Meridians and then the 12 Major Meridians (some schools refer to these together as the 14 Major Meridians.)

This method not only reveals the location of energy blockages or other issues on every Meridian (and for every Acupuncture Point on each Meridian), it also develops sensitivity to subtle flows in the human energy system.

This process of testing is fairly extensive, so expect to spend about an hour on the complete test when you are first learning it. Don't go faster than you can accurately test each meridian and each acupuncture point within that meridian. If you don't have time to go through the entire 12 meridian flow in one session, then do what you have time for and then come back and pick up where you left off in a future session. Don't make the mistake of putting off doing the practice until you have "lots of time" and then never getting around to it! Even if you only have 5 minutes, start the process now and continue it later.

With practice, it will take only a moment to test each acupuncture point within each meridian. Even a meridian with many points, such as the 67 points in the Bladder Meridian, can be done within a few minutes as your skills develop.

ITEMS NEEDED FOR THIS PRACTICE:

- * Laminated Acupressure Chart
- * Neutral Pendulum
- * A witness of the Person being Vibrationally tested
- * A Pointer (wooden pointer or skewer is best, or a pencil if that is all you have)
- * Paper and Pen, to make notes of where you find problems in the Meridians to come back later to find ways to correct those issues.

We will be using the Laminated Acupressure Chart for this testing. The testing method is essentially identical to that which we used with the Anatomy chart; only now instead of putting our pointer on a location within the accurately drawn organ or body part, we will put our pointer on each of the Meridians beginning with Point 1 of the Meridian we are testing at the time.

Just as with organs, if the Acupuncture Point or Location on the Meridian we have the pointer on (and which of course we are focusing our attention on) is in good condition then we will have the pendulum (tuned to Personal Wavelength over a person's witness) continue to rotate Clockwise (CW) as strongly as did when tuning to pure Personal Wavelength (PW) for the person. If the Point or place on the Meridian we are testing is slightly blocked or weakened, the CW spin will slow down; if it reverses to Counterclockwise (CCW), this shows that the location we are testing is severely blocked or otherwise out of balance.

Begin with the Laminated Acupressure Chart open up fully to its front side. Tune your Neutral Pendulum (NP) over the Witness of the person you are testing to their Personal Wavelength, which will put the NP into a CW spin over the Witness.

Then touch the Pointer to the location on the Acupressure Chart you want to test. Always start with Point 1 of the Meridian you are testing, then slowly move the Pointer from Point 1 to Point 2 so that you are testing the Meridian pathway between the two points as you go. Make sure that you keep the pointer down on the Meridian line as you go from point to point, so that you can also find any problems that may be occurring in the pathway between points. DON'T just touch the pointer on each point, skipping the Meridian line in between the Points; you may miss something crucial if you omit tracing the entire line of the Meridian!

Remember that to be sure you are testing accurately, you will need to see variable results at different locations. Some areas should be fully strong CW, others weaker CW, and some may be weakly or strongly CCW. If everything tests exactly the same, it is unlikely you are connecting accurately to the person's energy field through the chart.

In addition, we have described for each Meridian one Acupuncture Point which is commonly used in Chinese Medicine, to give a sense of the specialized functions of the different Points. This is a fascinating area of study; one of the best resources in English is the text Energetic Physiology in the Acupuncture Pointnames by Dennis Wilmont (available from the Vesica Institute), which examines the multiple names in Chinese of the Acupuncture Points and what they indicate about the powers inherent within each Point. Be aware that the Points on the Meridians are commonly found in depressions (some more obvious than others) on the body surface, which helps in locating them.

When testing yourself on the Acupuncture Charts, be sure to tune into the Meridian and the Acupuncture Point you are testing in your own body. Feel the link between where your attention is on the Chart, and how it feels in your body as you see the reaction of the Pendulum. This opens up deep levels of inner perception of these Energy Centers and Meridians.

PREPARATION:

- * Do basic exercises to clear your energy field and to attain a Clear Mind state before beginning.
- * Drink pure water before beginning.
- * Touch the tip of your tongue to the roof of the mouth during testing, to help your energy flow.
- * If you are testing yourself, remove any vibrational items you are wearing on your body.
- * Say a prayer for Divine Guidance and Assistance in your testing and energy balancing work for both yourself and for the person you are working on.

PART ONE: TESTING THE MIDLINE MERIDIANS: CONCEPTION AND GOVERNING VESSELS

1. The Conception Vessel (Yin)

The Conception Vessel is called the “Ren” Meridian in Chinese Medicine, which means “direction” or “responsibility.” Just as the Governing Vessel oversees all the Yang Meridians, so the Conception Vessel oversees all the Yin Meridians plus the Stomach Meridian (which runs in the front of the body). The name Conception Vessel is related to its function in nourishing the Genitals and particularly the Uterus, the location of Conception. The Conception Vessel controls the distribution of Guardian Qi all over the abdomen through many small Chi branches known as the Luo, as well as helping distribute the bodily fluids through the abdomen.

COMMONLY USED POINT: CV4. Located below the navel, in the general area known in Chinese Internal Alchemy as the Lower Dan Tien (Lower Elixir Field) which is the safe storage area for Chi (Life Force). CV4 is involved in this storage and building up of Chi, of life energy reserves in the body. CV4 is often paired with SP6 in healing practices. CV4 helps with all kinds of lower abdominal issues, including those involving urination, low sexual energy, hernia, rectal prolapse, diarrhea, menstrual irregularities and gynecological infections, etc.

THE FLOW: The Conception Vessel begins at CV 1, located at the Perineum at the base of the abdomen (midway between the genitals and the anus.) This is an extremely important energetic point, and is critical for many practices of internal alchemy. The energy flow continues straight up the front centerline of the body to end at CV 24 just under the midline of the lower lip.

TESTING: Start with your Pointer on CV 1, using the full front of the body illustration on the front of your Acupressure Chart. You will find CV 1 at the base of the abdomen, at the Perineum. Follow along the entirety of the CV Meridian from CV 1 to 24, testing along the entirety of the Meridian flow, and pausing a bit longer at each Point to test.

2. The Governing Vessel (Yang)

The Governing Vessel is given that name because it “governs” all the Yang meridians. This is apparent from its pathway because it flows up the midline of the back, a Yang area, and in the center of all Yang channels (except the stomach channel which flows in the front). The Governing Vessel is used in Chi Kung practices to increase the Yang energy of the body.

The Governing Vessel is responsible for the circulation of the body's “Guardian Chi” which helps the body to keep out toxic invaders or vibrations. Guardian Qi is related to the circulation of Fire energy in the body in Chinese Medicine, which is connected to concepts of Kundalini running up the Spine in the Indian Yoga tradition. It protects the Brain, Spinal Cord, and major functions of the body.

COMMONLY USED POINT: GV20. Located at the very top of the head, it is a Point in the area which in Indian Chakra studies is called the Crown Center (Sahasrara). The name for this Point in Chinese Medicine is Bai Hui, meaning “Hundred Convergences” and the Crown Center in India is known as the “Thousand Petal Lotus”; these terms indicate the tremendous number of aspects and functions in this area. GV20 is the area where the Heavenly, Yang Chi and Solar Energy enter into the head; in some energetic practices GV20 is opened at the very beginning, to activate and balance energy flows. The Point is used to give energy to the head, and is related to memory, emotions, behaviour, and IQ. Used to overcome dizziness, low blood pressure, headache, vertigo, speech problems, hair loss, tinnitus, and prolapse of the uterus and rectum. Some Chinese Medicine practitioners use it for Parkinson's, and Alzheimer's.

THE FLOW: The Governing Vessel begins at the base of the Spine at GV 1. This is also a very important energy point in the body, connected to Kundalini energy as described in the Indian tradition. The flow goes straight up the midline of the spine to the top of the head, over the crown to descend down the top of the head to terminate at GV 28 at the upper lip.

TESTING: Start with your Pointer on GV 1 using the full back of the body illustration on the back side of your Acupressure Chart. You will find GV 1 at the base of the spine. Follow along the entirety of the GV Meridian from CV 1 to 28, testing along the entirety of the Meridian flow, and pausing a bit longer at each Point to test.

You will be able to test Governing Vessel Points 1 through 20 on the back of the body illustration on the back side of your Acupressure Chart, then flip the chart over and test on the front of the body illustration starting with GV 21 at the top of the head. Follow the Meridian down the midline of the front of the head, to where it terminates at the top lip at GV 28.

NOTE: We are testing the CV and GV according to their innate direction of energy flow. For more advanced practices, these two flows can combine into one flow that runs up the spine and down the front of the body (the CV essentially reverses direction) to create a continuous flow through the midline of the back and front of the body; it can also reverse and go the opposite direction for energy clearing purposes. For these practices, touching the tip of the tongue to the roof of the mouth is essential, to allow the CV and GV to link together into one flow.

However for the purposes of the present practices, the best approach is to focus now just on the innate direction of flow of CV (Up the front of the body) and GV (up the spine and down over the top front of the head.)

As discussed previously, for vibrational testing it is helpful for the tester to have the tip of their tongue connected to the roof of their mouth, to keep their own energy flow strong in their body while testing.

These two meridians merge into one continuous flow pattern in the “Microcosmic Orbit” practice which is very important in Taoist Yoga. When the tip of the tongue is connected to the roof of your mouth, this creates a bridge where the energy from GV 28 flows down the tongue to connect to CV 24. The Conception Vessel Meridian then reverses direction so that the energy now flows downwards, reaching CV 1 at the Perineum. The energy then flows from CV 1 to connect to GV 1, creating a continuous loop of energy which runs up your back and down the front of your body. This energy circuit is very important for healthy circulation of energy in your body.

As mentioned, touching your tongue to the roof of your mouth creates the connection between the GV and CV Meridians on one end of the circuit. The other end of the circuit (from CV 1 to GV 1) can be connected through:

- a) Putting your mind at the Perineum, then leading the energy with your attention to the tip of your tailbone.
- b) Squeezing the muscle at the Perineum tight.
- c) Flexing the muscles of the buttocks tightly, so that the tip of the tailbone is pulled forward and inward by the muscular contraction.

PART TWO: TESTING THE 12 PRIMARY ENERGY MERIDIANS

The 12 Primary Energy Meridians are linked together into a single continuous flow pattern, which unfortunately is not well known today. This continuous flow is explicitly taught within the “5 Element Acupuncture” school, based on the work of J.R. Worsley. 5 Element Acupuncture is an ancient tradition of Chinese Medicine, with aspects which differ from Tradition Chinese Medicine (TCM). TCM is the form of Chinese Medicine which was reorganized during the Communist era in China, stripping out many older esoteric and spiritual concepts (some of which are retained in 5 Elements Acupuncture and in Taoist Schools of Chinese Medicine.) For more information on the Worsley school of 5 Element Acupuncture and the interlocking flow pattern of the Meridians, see the book Classical Five-Element Acupuncture: Volume I, Meridians and Points by J. R. Worsley.

Note: for those trained in Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM) systems other than 5 Elements Acupuncture, this sequence is different from the “Horary Clock” cycle which starts with the Lung Meridian rather than the Heart Meridian.

Meridian flows are complex and can have multiple branches, so for this practice we have greatly simplified the system and will only describe the main flow between the Meridians and not the various side branches.

For each Meridian we have also provided a general introduction to Physical and Psychological Symptoms related to that Meridian when in an unbalanced state.

1. The Heart Meridian (Yin)

Physical Symptoms of imbalanced meridian: Heart issues (pain, palpitations), dull eyes or pain in eyes, vertigo, difficulties speaking or expressing oneself, insomnia. The Heart is the “Emperor” of the body in Chinese Medicine (and other systems) so if it is disturbed then the whole system is unbalanced.

Psychological Symptoms: Sadness, depression, lack of joy, fear, excessive talking, feeling unloved and unprotected, emotional stress, unrest, fear, pronounced grief, concentration disturbances.

The heart and the small intestine are paired organs. They control the blood vessels and are reflected in the face.

THE FLOW: The whole flow pattern begins in the center of the Heart. Spiritually this is of great significance, as many world traditions (Ancient Egyptian, Rosicrucians, Sufis, and many others) describe how the Heart is not simply a pump; it is the location which connects us to the greater spiritual source of our existence.

From its origin deep inside the heart, the energy splits into three paths. For the purpose of our energetic testing practice, we will only describe here one of these paths. This particular path starts with a bilateral split; the vital energy moves up the heart through the aorta, passes into the lungs on each side, then moves up around the inside edge of the pectorals and becomes superficial at the exposed artery in the underarms. This is where you will pick up Point 1 on the Heart Meridian on the upper inner part of each arm.

COMMONLY USED POINT: H7. Located on the inside of the wrist on the pinky side (radial) of the wrist area. Used for Emotional or Psychological Heart issues, “broken heart.” Calms down, relaxes, helps with insomnia or disturbing dreams, hysteria, depression, agitation, mental illness, fatigue from stress.

STEP ONE OF TESTING: Start with your Pointer on Heart 1 using the full front of the body on your Acupressure Chart. Start with the Heart 1 Point on the LEFT side of the person’s body (which means it will appear to you on the right side of the chart.) You will find Heart 1 at the upper inner part of the arm, slightly below the armpit.

Start by testing Heart 1, then continue slowly tracing the Meridian to Heart 2, always tracing the full length of the Meridian flow in addition to pausing at each point to see how it tests. Test the complete Meridian along the arm until you come to the final point, Heart 9, when you will finish the testing by moving to the picture of the outer side of the hand at the bottom left of the front of the Acupressure Chart.

This shows you the position of Heart 9 at the inner side (toward the ring finger) of the nail bed of the pink finger; however this diagram at the bottom left of the front of the chart is for the right hand only, so to test the left hand at Heart 9 you can turn the chart over to the back side, which shows the full-length back of the body and back of the arm. Although not marked on this back of the arm illustration, you can test the Heart 9 point on the nail bed of the left pinky finger on this picture.

2. The Small Intestine Meridian (Yang)

Physical Symptoms of imbalanced meridian: Emaciation, Blueish lips, sweating, swollen nodules, pain in temples or side of neck, weak elbows, functional stomach issues, pain in lower abdomen, tinnitus, ear infections.

Psychological Symptoms: Inability to properly assimilate ideas. All issues involving being able to separate the pure from the impure, whether in thoughts, feelings, or actions; can lead to cruelty, hate, sexually deviant behaviours, impatience. Coping with emotional and mental demands and pressures; feeling lost, vulnerable, deserted by others. The heart and the small intestine are paired organs. They control the blood vessels and are reflected in the face. The major function of the small intestine is to separate waste material from the nutritious elements in food.

THE FLOW: The Heart Meridian Point 9 crosses over the fingernail bed on the pinky finger to connect to the Small Intestine Meridian on the opposite side of the nail bed.

COMMONLY USED POINT: SI3. Located on the side of the hand below the little finger. Used for seizures, fevers, night sweats, mental problems, pain and stiffness in the neck, issues in chest and lower back.

STEP TWO OF TESTING: Start with your Pointer on SI 1 Point on the full back side of the body illustration on the back of the Chart. Start with the SI 1 Point on the LEFT side of the person's body (which means it will appear to you on the left side of the chart now since you are looking at the back of the body.) You will find SI 1 at the outer nail bed of the pinky finger.

Test along the entirety of the SI meridian, pausing a bit longer at each Point to test. The SI meridian has a complex flow which is hard to show completely in just one illustration, so you can track on the back illustration of the body up to SI Point 15, which is on the back of the shoulder (trapezius). Then the meridian moves to the side of the body, so shift then to the diagram of the right side of the body shown on the lower right of the back side of your Chart.

Note: Since this Chart is limited by showing only the right side of the body and not showing the left side, you will need to trace the rest of the SI Meridian here on this right side of the body diagram for both the left and right sides. For testing the left side flow which we have just begun, simply focus your attention on the left side of the person's body you are working on while you test these points. If you find that too difficult or confusing, go to the Internet and print off a picture of the SI Meridian as it appears on the left side of a person's body to use for your testing.

Using the side of the body illustration at the lower right of the back of the Chart, you will see it shows the SI Meridian toward the back of the body starting with SI 9. You have already tested up to Point SI 15, so just move ahead on the chart to SI 15 and continue your testing from there. You will see that SI 16 is on the neck, SI 17 around the jaw, SI 18 on the cheek, and the final Point SI 19 is just in front of the ear (it is in red on this diagram, and has a line going from it to its translated Chinese name SI 19 “Listening Place”). Remember to have your attention on the LEFT side of the person’s body when testing these areas.

There are many lines and points on the human head and face, so be sure you stay on the SI Meridian in your testing, and do not drift onto other Meridians!

4. The Bladder (Urinary Bladder) Meridian (Yang)

Physical Symptoms of imbalanced meridian: Neurological disorders, problems with the spine or waist, headaches, stiff neck, eye problems, lumbar pain, sexual organ dysfunctions, problems in the bladder, urinary disorders including incontinence.

Psychological Symptoms: Resisting change, fear of letting go, and basic negative attitude. Timidity or over-enthusiasm. Suspicion, Jealousy, Irritation.

The kidneys (Yin) and the urinary bladder (Yang) are paired organs. They control the bones, marrow and brain, and their health is reflected in the hair of the head. The main function of the urinary bladder is to transform fluids into urine and excrete it from the body.

THE FLOW: The Small Intestine Meridian Point 18 at the cheekbone branches off to the inside point of both eyes, where it connects to Point 1 of the Urinary Bladder Meridian (sometimes called just the Bladder Meridian, not to be confused with the Gallbladder Meridian.) The Bladder Meridian has a complex flow pattern, moving from the inner point of the eyes, up the head, across the scalp, down the neck and back to Point 35, then moving back up the body (slightly out to the side of the body) to just below the shoulders to begin again at Point 36, then continue down the back of the body to end at the little toes. The Bladder Meridian has the most recognized points of any Meridian: 67 Points total. It is particularly important because it flows along the spine in two parallel lines on each side, connecting with internal organs along the route.

Note: There are different numbering systems for some points on the Bladder Meridian, which can be confusing; there is a traditional numbering system and the new Western numbering system. This is reflected on your chart by numbers in parentheses of the new Western numbering system, following the traditional numbering system (not in parentheses). For simplicity, we will only be following the main numbering system shown on your Chart for this practice, and will not be referencing the numbering system in the parentheses.

COMMONLY USED POINT: UB54. Located on the back of the knee. Connects to the Kidney (increases Kidney circulation) and middle and lower back issues. Used for back and hip pain, leg problems, acute stomach or abdominal pain, vomiting, diarrhea, stroke.

STEP THREE OF TESTING: Start with your Pointer on B1 Point on the full front of the body illustration on the front side of the Chart. Start with the B1 Point on the LEFT side of the person's body (which means it will appear to you on the right side of the chart now since you are looking at the front of the body.) You will find B1 at the inner point of the eye.

Test along the entirety of the Bladder meridian, pausing a bit at each Point to test. The Bladder Meridian runs up the forehead from the eyes, then goes across the top of the head and down the back of the head, neck, and back. Testing on the front side of the chart, you will be able to go to B 5 at the top of the forehead. Then flip the Chart over to the back side and you can track the movement from Point 5 to Point 6 to Point 7 from the side view at the lower right side of the Chart. Then for the rest of the Bladder Meridian you can track it from the full back view of the body illustration, beginning with Point 7 at the top of the head (note that the numbers for the points are only given for the right side Bladder Points, however the actual Points are shown on both sides.) This Bladder Meridian flow runs down the back to Point 35 around the base of the spine, then moves to Point 36 which you will find shifted back up to the shoulder area and moved toward the outer side of the body. You can then track down the body from point B36 all down the back and legs to the final point at B67 at the Pinky toe nail bed.

4. The Kidney Meridian (Yin)

Physical Symptoms of imbalanced meridian: Lack of sexual energy, chronic fatigue, Lower back problems, chronic constitutional issues, weak bones, memory issues, prostate problems, reproductive disorders, kidney stones, swelling, teeth issues, inner ear issues and equilibrium problems, vertigo.

Psychological Symptoms: Negativity, Disappointment, Criticism, Fear, Dread, Shame, Childish reactions, psychological sexual issues. Anger can create Kidney Stones. The kidneys (Yin) and the urinary bladder (Yang) are paired organs. They control the bones, marrow and brain, and their health is reflected in the hair of the head. One of the kidneys' functions is the metabolism of water. Gives qualities of gentleness and endurance.

THE FLOW: The Bladder Meridian Point 67 at the outer nail bed of the Pinky toes runs a line of energy to the Kidney 1 Point at the sole of the foot. This Kidney 1 Point is very important in both Chinese Medicine and in Chi Kung (internal energy and internal alchemy) work, since it is where the Earth energy primarily enters into our body's energy system.

COMMONLY USED POINT: K1 (K3 is also often used as a key Kidney point, but for purposes of our Radiesthesia work K1 is a good initial point to focus on.) Located on the bottom of the foot; make a fist with your toes and you will see a depression beneath the ball of the foot that is K1. This is a major point for connecting to Earth energy and grounding the human energy system (LV3 is also a point which helps to pull energy down to the feet.) K1 helps pull stuck congested energy in the head down the body, helping the person to calm down and get grounded; helps lower hypertension, reduces nausea.

STEP FOUR OF TESTING: Start with your Pointer on the Kidney 1 Point on the full back of the body illustration, on the back side of the Chart. Start with the K 1 Point on the LEFT side of the person's body (which means it will appear to you on the left side of the chart now, since you are looking at the back of the body.) You will find K1 at the bottom of the foot.

Test along the entirety of the Kidney Meridian, pausing a bit at each Point to test. The Kidney Meridian runs from the sole of the foot up inside of the leg, then up the abdomen and chest.

You will be able to use the back of the body illustration to test the Kidney Meridian from K1 to K10, then switch to the front of the body illustration to continue testing from Kidney 11 (at groin level) to the final point Kidney 27 (in the upper chest). Then follow the same pattern testing on the right side of the body.

NOTE: The Laminated Acupressure Chart has an important error on it; it shows "K" (for Kidney Meridian) on the front of the body reappearing at the front of the legs around the level of the knees; this is NOT the Kidney Meridian, this is the Liver Meridian. Mark out the 'K' and put in a 'LV' there. The actual Kidney Meridian reappears on the front of the body illustration at the Meridian line in the upper thighs which has no notation of which Meridian it is; put a 'K' there to remind you that is the Kidney Meridian.

5. The Pericardium Meridian (Yin)

Physical Symptoms of imbalanced meridian: heart malfunctions, chest pressure, pain in thorax, spasms, flushed face, blood circulation problems, inflammations, sweating of hands, pain in eyes or blurred vision.

Psychological Symptoms: Confusion, delirium, psychosis, sexual perversions, phobias, mental illness, core sadness, inability to express or feel positive emotions. The pericardium (Yin) and the triple burner (Yang) are paired organs. The pericardium primarily protects the Heart, and governs circulation and hormones.

THE FLOW: The Kidney Meridian connects internally to the Pericardium Meridian, which has its own origin in the Heart. The Pericardium Meridian emerges at Pericardium Point 1 which is in the outer part of the breast pectoral area.

COMMONLY USED POINT: P6. Located on the inner arm above the wrist, between two tendons. Used with issues related to the Upper Warmer, which is the area above the nipples including heart, lung, chest, and thymus gland. Used for airsickness and carsickness, morning sickness in pregnant women, nausea, vomiting, a sick feeling of heat in the body, spasms, and convulsions. In TCM this is a major point for any chest or heart issue, including emotional issues related to the heart.

STEP FIVE OF TESTING: Start with your Pointer on the Pericardium 1 Point on the full front of the body illustration, on the front side of the Chart. Start with the P 1 Point on the LEFT side of the person's body (which means it will appear to you on the right side of the chart now, since you are looking at the front of the body.) You will find P1 at the outer part of the breast pectoral area.

Test along the entirety of the Pericardium Meridian, pausing a bit at each Point to test. The Pericardium Meridian runs from the outer pectoral area down the inside of the arm. It ends with P9 at the nail bed of the middle finger.

6. The Triple Warmer Meridian (Yang)

The Triple Warmer regulates the relationship between the chest, abdomen, and pelvis areas of the body, and also regulates heat. It is the source of Protective “Wei” Chi. Influences distribution of Blood, Chi, and Fluids.

Physical Symptoms of imbalanced meridian: Water imbalances, fevers or shivering (problems in heat regulation), headaches, sore throat or swollen throat, red eyes, ear problems or deafness, thirst, problems with digestion or elimination.

Psychological association: Depression, Emotional upsets caused by the end of relationships of any kind, suspicion, anxiety, destructive thoughts, confusion.

THE FLOW: The Pericardium Meridian connects from P8 in the Palm of the hand, to the Triple Warmer Point 1 at the nail base of the ring finger (on the side of the nail base closest to the Pinky finger.)

COMMONLY USED POINT: TW5. Located on the back side of the arm, directly opposite P6 which is on the front side of the arm; TW5 is called the “Outer Gate” and P6 the “Inner Gate” (Gate Points in the Meridians are important healing points.) The Triple Warmer is an energetic concept (with no direct equivalent in Western medicine.) Used for locations along the path of the Meridian (head, ears, neck, arms, hands, fingers) and generally for issues with chi energy circulation, body heat, muscular and bone problems.

STEP SIX OF TESTING: Start with your Pointer on the Triple Warmer 1 Point on the full back of the body illustration, on the back side of the Chart. Start with the TW1 Point on the LEFT side of the person’s body (which means it will appear to you on the left side of the chart now, since you are looking at the back of the body.) You will find TW1 at the nail base of the ring finger (on the side of the nail base closest to the Pinky finger.)

Test along the entirety of the Triple Warmer Meridian, pausing a bit at each Point to test. The TW Meridian runs from the ring finger nail bed up the outer arm to the neck and the side of head, terminating at TW21 at the front of the ear. You will be able to test on the back of the body illustration up to TW20, then you will need to move to the picture of the side of the body, on the lower right of the same side of the chart. This right side of the body illustration shows the rest of the TW Points, ending at TW23 at the outer edge of the eyebrows. Only the right side of the body is illustrated with these points, so you will need to focus your awareness on the left side of the person’s head you are working on, when testing those points on the left side; the illustration is correct for testing the right side of the body.

7. The Gall Bladder Meridian (Yang)

Physical Symptoms of imbalanced meridian: Insomnia, pains that wander around the body, swollen breasts, weak muscles, difficulty standing, bitter taste in mouth in morning, vomiting eye problems, Mouth ulcers, tooth illnesses, tonsillitis, weakness in legs, nausea and vertigo, headache, chills or fever, excessive sighing, pale complexion to the point of looking ashen.

Psychological association: Bitterness, rage, anger, agitation, resentment, prideful, emotionally repressed leading to depression and indecisiveness, timidity, hypochondria. The liver (Yin) and the gall bladder (yang) are paired organs. They control the sinews (muscles and joints). The main function of the gall bladder is storing and excreting the bile produced by the liver. Together with the heart, the gall bladder is responsible for decision-making. Purifies Yang energy, controls circulation of nourishing and protective energies.

THE FLOW: The Triple Warmer Meridian connects from TW23 (at the outer edge of the eyebrows) in a straight line down to Gall Bladder Point 1 which is located slightly to the side of the outer edge of the eye. P8 in the Palm of the hand, to the Triple Warmer Point 1 at the nail base of the ring finger (on the side of the nail base closest to the Pinky finger.)

COMMONLY USED POINT: GB20. Located where the back of the neck joins the base of the skull. Major point for Wind disorders. Stimulation of this point has an awakening effect, can dispel dizziness and some kinds of headache. Lowers blood pressure, relaxes tension. Used for problems with the eyes, sinuses, jaw (TMJ), teeth and gums, and acute disorders including cold, flu, and fever.

STEP SEVEN OF TESTING: Start with your Pointer on the Gall Bladder 1 Point at the outer edge of the eye, on the illustration of the right side of the body found in the lower right hand part of the back side of the Chart. You will again start by testing the GB Meridian on the LEFT side of the person's body, which -- since the illustration only shows the right side of the body -- will require your keeping your energetic attention focused on the left side of their body when testing the left side (the illustration will be accurate when you later test the right side of the body.)

The Gall Bladder Meridian has a complex movement pattern, moving:

- * down to in front of the lower part of the ear,
- * then up the side of the head to then arch over the back of the ear,
- * to then arch forward again higher up on the side of the head,
- * then arch back again still higher up on the side of the head,
- * to continue down the rear side of the head,
- * down to the side of the neck to run down the side of the body
- * and down the outer side of the leg to terminate at the final Point, GB44, located at the outer nail bed of the ring toe.

After testing the left side of the body for the GB Meridian, test the right side of the body (remember the illustration is correct for the right side of the body, whereas when you test the left side of the body you will have to keep your attention focused on that side of the person you are testing.)

8. The Liver Meridian (Yin)

Physical Symptoms of imbalanced meridian: Lack of energy, Issues with fingernails, toenails or nervous system. Difficulty swallowing with feeling of a lump in the throat. Problems with muscles, tendons, ligaments. Pain in Throat. Difficulty moving head up and down. Issues in the liver and genital systems (impotence or frigidity). Waist or Lower back pain or other issues. Dizziness, high blood pressure, nausea, eye problems.

Psychological association: Anger, Frustration, Chronic Complaining, Taking Offense, Irrationality, Excessive Criticism of Others to Justify Oneself.

The liver (Yin) and the gall bladder (Yang) are paired organs. They control the sinews (muscles and joints). One of the important functions of the liver is regulation of blood volume and the free flow of Chi in the body.

THE FLOW: The Gall Bladder Meridian connects from the top of the foot at GB41 to the outside nail bed of the big toe at Liver Point 1.

COMMONLY USED POINT: LV3. Located on the top of the foot between the bones running from the Big Toes and the Index Toe (ie between first and second metatarsal bones), a position on the foot which is similar to that of LI4 on the hand. LI4 and LV3 are used as a pair known as the “Four Gates” for the four points (right and left sides) on the hands and feet which can benefit energy flow in the body. LV3 helps to guide the chi down from the chest; reduces hypertension and pain in the chest, lowers high blood pressure, helps headaches. Also used for balancing the emotions, regulating menstruation, Bell’s Palsy, and eye disorders.

STEP EIGHT OF TESTING:

NOTE: Unfortunately the Bar Charts Laminated Acupressure Chart we are using for testing has two key errors you need to be aware of:

1. On the front of the chart (front view of entire body) the Liver Meridian reappears at the location at the knees; this is incorrectly marked ‘K’ for Kidney Meridian, it should be marked ‘LV’ for Liver Meridian. As noted earlier in this section, the Kidney Meridian actually reappears higher up the leg, in the upper thigh on the frontal view (not noted on the Chart which Meridian that is.) So the Liver Meridian runs up the front of the body from the location at the knees incorrectly marked ‘K’ on the chart.
2. On the back of the chart in the upper right corner is a view of the inside of the leg with a portion of the Liver Meridian marked. Note that above LV8 the next point is also marked ‘8’. It should be LV9.

Below are instructions for testing on your Laminated Chart, remembering the note above about the two errors!

Start with your Pointer on the Liver 1 Point on the front side of the Chart on the full front of the body illustration, at the nail bed of the big toe. Start with the Liver 1 Point on the LEFT side of the person’s body (which means it will appear to you on the right side of the chart now, since you are looking at the front of the body.) Both left and right views appear on this illustration for the first 5 Points of the Liver Meridian, however (as in earlier cases) you will need to focus your awareness on the left side of the body of the person you are working on for later points which are only shown on the right side of the body (until you come to testing the right side points later, in which case the illustrations are correct.)

Test Liver Points 1 through 5 on the illustration of the front of the body, then flip the chart over to the back and continue to test on the illustration of the inside of the right leg shown in the upper right hand corner. This provides a view of Liver 5 through 9, with a line running up the inside of the leg from Liver 9 (incorrectly marked as LV8, as is the point beneath it which is the real LV8). Then switch to the front illustration of the entire front of the body; the Liver Meridian is shown at the knees leading to Point 9 again, unfortunately it is mislabeled 'K' when in reality this is 'LV', the Liver Meridian. Follow the trail up the front of the body until you reach the final Liver Point 14 in the chest at the base of the Pectorals.

After testing the left side of the body for the Liver Meridian, test the right side of the body. Remember that the illustration of the inner leg is of the right side, so it is correct for testing the right side of the body and does not require the focus on the person which was required when testing the person's left side on these illustrations.

9. The Lung Meridian (Yin)

Physical Symptoms of imbalanced meridian: Allergies, oxygen deficiency, skin issues, asthma, hard to breath, sensitive to cold, nose or throat problem, cold limbs.

Psychological Symptoms: Grief, Sadness, Worry.

The lungs (Yin) and the large intestine (Yang) are considered paired organs. Governs skin and hair. The lungs are sensitive to emotional changes, and help with the distribution of liquid and energy (chi) to the skin.

THE FLOW: The Liver Meridian runs a line of energy from Liver 13 (at the physical Liver) which runs inside the body into the diaphragm and connects to the Lung Meridian at Lung Point 1 where it reaches the surface in the upper chest near the shoulder.

COMMONLY USED POINT: LU7. Located above the wrist on the inside of the arm. Used for Lung and Neck problems, including headache and neck stiffness as well as facial paralysis.

STEP NINE OF TESTING: Start with your Pointer on the Lung 1 Point on the full front of the body illustration, on the front side of the Chart. Start with the Lung 1 Point on the LEFT side of the person's body (which means it will appear to you on the right side of the chart now, since you are looking at the front of the body.) You will find Lung 1 at the upper chest close to the shoulder.

Test along the entirety of the Lung Meridian, pausing a bit at each Point to test. The Lung Meridian runs from the upper chest down the inside of the arm. It ends with Lung 11 at the outer nail bed of the Thumb.

10. The Large Intestine Meridian (Yang)

Physical Symptoms of imbalanced meridian: Problems with elimination of solid waste from body (constipation or diarrhea), Sinusitis, tooth problems, fever or cold body, abdominal pain, skin diseases.

Psychological Symptoms: Fear of Letting Go, Defensiveness, Depression, Confusion, Obsession, Poisonous Thoughts and Ideas.

THE FLOW: The Lung Meridian runs a line of energy from Lung 7 below the wrist to connect to the Large Intestine Meridian at LI4 above the wrist, between the bones running to thumb and forefinger.

COMMONLY USED POINT: LI4. Located on the back of the hand, in the depression in front of the V shaped notch where the bones from the thumb and the first finger meet. This is the source point of the LI Meridian. Its uses include sending energy (chi) to the face, for any issues in the forehead, jaw, chin, mouth, gums, eyes, and sinus. Also used for pain relief and bowel disorders. Commonly used for Colds. Don't use on a pregnant woman, because it may cause miscarriage (although at the time of birth, it is said to be able to help deliver the baby.)

STEP TEN OF TESTING: The Large Intestine Meridian has a gap on the Laminated Chart between LI 11 and LI 16. To follow the continuous flow, print a view of these LI points from the Internet. Otherwise you can simply follow the flow on the Laminated Chart, skipping these points. Start with your Pointer on the LI 1 Point on the full back of the body illustration, on the back side of the Chart. Start with the LI 1 Point on the LEFT side of the person's body (which means it will appear to you on the left side of the chart now, since you are looking at the back of the body.) You will find Large Intestine 1 at the nail bed of the index finger.

You can test on this back view of the body from LI 1 to LI 11, then as mentioned previously there is a gap. Turn to the front of the Chart to the front view of the body, where you will be able to test the rest of the Large Intestine Meridian starting with LI 16 at the upper shoulder. This line continues up the neck and face to terminate at LI 20 at the outside base of the nose.

11. The Stomach Meridian (Yang)

Physical Symptoms of imbalanced meridian: Gastric disturbances, stomachaches, swollen stomach, nausea, vomiting, thirst, edema, eye problems, high fever, sinusitis, tooth or jaw problems.

Psychological Symptoms: Despair, Annoyance, Anxieties, Instability, Death Wish, Suspicious, Hysteria, Mania, Egotistical, Slow to absorb new ideas. Excessive mental work over many years leads to deficiency of chi in the stomach. The spleen (Yin) and the stomach (Yang) are paired organs. They absorb the Chi energy from food and assimilate it.

THE FLOW: The Large Intestine Meridian runs a line of energy from LI 20 at the outer base of the nose to Stomach Meridian Point 1 at the center of the base of the eye.

COMMONLY USED POINT: ST36. Located just below the knee. This point has been the focus of much clinical research in Chinese Medicine, which have demonstrated its use for numerous illnesses including anemia, fatigue, and immune system weakness. ST36 is related to the Middle Warmer, so it is often used to treat any issues which arise in this area of the body which runs from the navel to the nipples (including the stomach, spleen, liver and gall bladder, pancreas, and small intestines.) It is used for healing Yang deficiencies, just as SP6 is used for healing Yin deficiencies; the Stomach is considered part of the Middle Warmer and SP6 is related to the Lower Warmer. Some practitioners use the pair of ST36 and SP6 in most of their treatments, to balance Yin and Yang in the body. ST 36 is considered an important general health point, which bring chi down into the legs to resolve the many issues which arise when energy collects in the head and upper body; in China it is common for people to burn moxa on this point as a health maintenance practice. It replenishes the Triple Warmer, strengthens the Spleen, and helps with stomach issues including stomach pain, vomiting, and diarrhea.

STEP ELEVEN OF TESTING: Start with your Pointer on the Stomach 1 Point on the full front of the body illustration, on the front side of the Chart. Start with the Stomach 1 Point on the LEFT side of the person's body (which means it will appear to you on the right side of the chart now, since you are looking at the front of the body.) You will find Stomach 1 at the center of the base of the eye.

The Stomach Meridian descends from Stomach 1 to Stomach 5 at the jaw, where it splits. Points 6 through 8 ascend up the side of the face from Stomach 5. Then following the line downward from Stomach 5 the numbering picks up again with Stomach 9, then continues down the front of the body, through the nipples, down the abdomen and down the front of the legs to end at Stomach 45 at the outer edge of the nail bed of the index toe.

12. The Spleen Meridian (Yin)

Physical Symptoms of imbalanced meridian: Insufficient Lymphatic drainage, dampness, phlegm, digestive disorders, Lip or tongue issues, flatulence, nausea, memory failure or brain fatigue, obesity, edema, craving for sweets.

Psychological Symptoms: Obsession, Poor self-image, Living through others, Worry, Anxiety, Sadness. The spleen (Yin) and the stomach (Yang) are paired organs. They absorb the Chi energy from food and assimilate it.

THE FLOW: The Stomach Meridian runs a line of energy from Stomach 42 at the top of the foot to the Spleen Meridian Point 1 at the inside edge of the big toe nail bed.

COMMONLY USED POINT: SP6. Located above the ankle on the inner side of the leg, in a depression behind the bone. Its Chinese name “San Yin Jiao” means “the junction of three Yin Meridians”; it connects the Spleen, Liver, and Kidney meridians. This is the point for healing Yin deficiencies; it is used for the “Lower Warmer” of the Body which is in the abdomen and includes kidneys and adrenal glands, the colon, and reproductive organ issues (including hormonal issues of irregular menstruation and impotence) in both men and women.

STEP TWELVE OF TESTING: Start with your Pointer on the Spleen 1 Point on the full front of the body illustration, on the front side of the Chart. Start with the Spleen 1 Point on the LEFT side of the person’s body (which means it will appear to you on the right side of the chart now, since you are looking at the front of the body.) You will find Spleen 1 at the inside edge of the big toe nail bed.

This frontal view of the body allows you test both left and right views of Spleen Points 1 through 5. Then you will need to flip the chart over to the back side, and use the picture of the inside of the leg shown in the upper right corner. This will allow you to test from Spleen 5 to 10 (since this picture is only of the inside of the right leg, you will need to keep your attention on the left leg of the person’s body you are testing when testing the left side points, as described previously in similar cases.)

Then flip the chart back over to test the remainder of the Spleen Points on the front view of the body again, which gives you views of both the left and right sides of the body for testing. You will see Spleen 10 emerge on the inner thighs slightly above the knee level, then continue up the front of the leg and up the sides of the body to Spleen 20 at the upper outer chest, which then descends to the final Spleen Point 21 at the side of the body under the underarm.

As always, after testing the left side, test the right side of the body.

This completes the circuit. Spleen Meridian Point 21 connects through a deep line in the body to Heart Meridian Point 1.

C) Energy Balancing Wounds Through the Meridian Flows

Wounds will heal much more quickly if the area of the body that they are on is energy balanced. Wounds in an imbalanced area will persist much longer; use this as an indication that you need to energy balance that area more effectively.

In addition to testing on an Anatomy Chart for the person to see what will balance that area of the body, also test on an Acupuncture Chart to find what will balance the main Meridian running through the Wound area, and all Acupuncture Points in the Wound site. You may find healing to be accelerated when all the energy flows and centers in the body related to the Wound site are strong and balanced.

X. DETECTING THE PRESENCE OR ABSENCE OF ANY MATERIAL OR VIBRATION

Our final practice allows us to detect the presence or absence of any substance or vibrational quality, by connecting the neutral pendulum to a vibrational witness for that quality.

This can be used to detect the presence of specific Items whether Beneficial (nutrients, desired materials) or Harmful (toxins, poor quality materials) within your body, food, drink, supplements, building materials, a commercial product, in the environment etc. It can also be used to find things which are not seen: hidden objects for example.

Ways of connecting a Witness Sample with the Pendulum include:

1. Putting the sample inside a hollow pendulum (this is a method popularized by Abbe Mermet who used hollowed out pendulums, which are usually termed “witness” or “chamber” pendulums.)
2. Attaching the sample to the body of the neutral pendulum.
3. Holding the witness in the non-dowsing hand and connecting it with our attention and our energy field to the neutral pendulum held in the dowsing hand.

In this method, connect the vibration of a physical Witness (which can be anything: a sample of a person’s vibration, a mineral sample, sample of a toxin, etc.) to a neutral pendulum; once they are connected, you will feel a PULL on the neutral pendulum when testing anything which has the same vibration as the Witness you have connected to the pendulum.

NOTE: There is no specific meaning between clockwise vs. counterclockwise spins in this method, any Pull indicates that the same vibration which is in the witness is present in the energy field being tested.

- * It is not essential to calibrate the string length of the pendulum used, as it is getting its vibration by the physical sample you are using and does not require having it from calibrated string length.
- * However the Personal Wavelength method can be added to this technique by calibrating the string length of the neutral pendulum to the Witness, in addition to connecting to the physical witness.

Practice this at home with materials you have on hand. Refer to the Video and Audio of this course for examples.

CONCLUSION

9 PRINCIPLES TO REMEMBER

1. Clear your Energy Field and Mind before you start working.
2. Energy follows Attention.
3. When first learning a new Vibrational Testing technique, test things of a known vibrational quality first to make sure you can get the correct testing results for them, before testing unknown things.
4. Make sure you can get variable results in your testing, from one extreme to the other (strengthening and weakening.)
5. Observe any sensations you have in your body when testing, which are indicators of your energy field reacting to specific types of Vibration.
6. Remember that this training has taught you how to practice, not given you skills. Your skills can only be developed through regular practice, allowing your system to entrain to the vibrational methods.
7. Relax and enjoy the process, rather than focusing on just the goal. This will take you much further than a stressful attitude.
8. This work is for your personal exploration; you do not have to prove yourself to anyone, or try to convince any skeptics.
9. Test yourself regularly on the Laminated Charts to be sure you stay energetically clear, and are not picking up detrimental vibrations into your field by your testing other people and energy fields.
