Au CHC

My dear friend,

Allow me to dedicate this book to you as a testimony of my profound gratitude for the enlightened assistance that you have kindly lent me in the development of my work. It is only thanks to you, thanks to your tested friendship, that it was able to see the light of day, in French at least.

He is the child of our conversations so full of interest, of those long winter evenings, when we lived outside the frames of time and space in the vertiginous abysses of ancient thought.

It was you who suggested that I share with the public these few ideas, which you sometimes find original.

But, you know as I do, there's nothing new in what I'm saying here; quite the contrary: all that is very old, even ancient. I didn't invent anything, I used both contemporary and old documents, in which I only dotted the i's, and from which I made a few logical deductions.

*What distinguishes this work from others dealing with the same question is its orientation. I tried to reconstitute the old point of view on Astrology, like crowned and occult science. I endeavored to demonstrate that it had its raison d'être, even more, that it was important, that by removing this part of it one deprived it of its soul, leaving only a dead carcass.*

It is a very difficult work that we had undertaken especially in our materialistic century.

Shake up the assertions of official science, demonstrate that, in the Universe, there are things that escape our calculation, human reflections, finally, ensure that this something is essential, because it is life itself — what a thankless task!

You realize it as well as I do. Did I succeed? I do not know.

It's up to the reader to judge.

FOREWORD

This book cannot be considered as a treatise on Astrology.

It was written to react against erroneous tendencies.

Currently, those who practice Astrology have deviated from the path of tradition and are confined almost solely to the astronomical field.

We reject with disdain the occult part of Millennial and supra-human Science, we want to explain it by calculation and study it within the framework of the three dimensions...

This method is admissible only for one part of Astrology: its astronomical skeleton. But is that all of Astrology? Far from it.

Astrology has two areas:

i° The astronomical part; z° The cabbalistic part.

Contemporary astrologers, enslaved by official science, recognize only the first part and sharply reject the second as something left behind, a memory of dark times.

For them, the sages of antiquity who devoted themselves to Cabbalistic Astrology were plunged into error. However, it seems childish to think of predicting the future with the miserable means of modern science. The latter can obviously control certain manifestations of the laws of nature, but it is far from understanding them as a whole and even further from reconstituting their chain.

Life, in its infinite modalities, escapes science and it is in vain that with the help of astronomical calculations we hope to elucidate the primordial question of the existence of man.

This question belongs entirely to Astrology which studies it in the three planes.

On the other hand, without a religious basis, Astrology is only a vulgar game of chance.

Sometimes we hear that such and such, among contemporary astrologers, had successfully predicted an event of some kind. Naturally, this gives his omens an air of infallibility.

But, if you ask him to tell you the percentage of his predictions duly checked, he will answer you, if he is in good faith, that the latter is extremely weak and that he considers his happy results as coincidences or due encounters. randomly.

He knows very well that despite all the precision brought in his operations, he is never certain of his prognoses.

I affirm that it is impossible for mathematicians and astronomers, despite their scientific background and the knowledge they may have of the precise positions of the stars, to solve the problems which dominate human calculations.

Any disinterested mind who has wanted to deepen contemporary so-called scientific Astrology, and to study the laws of life from this angle, has always experienced disappointments.

Let's take an example from another area of science.

We can observe the manifestations of the force known as electricity, control some of its applications, but are we fixed on its nature?

Can we say that we know all its properties? No.

We have the impression that this electricity is part of the multiple forces which determine and maintain the life of the Universe and that it is found in all that surrounds us.

However, this opinion is not based on any scientific reasoning and, although science makes new discoveries daily, it cannot claim full knowledge of this force which plays, among many others, an important role in nature.

Such knowledge, moreover, is beyond the possibilities of human intelligence.

Current Science shows a childish vanity in wanting to confine within the field of its action the infinite Nature with its impenetrable laws.

Man, alas! looks like a blind man who is in a walled enclosure. He constantly bumps into the walls of his prison; he touches them, grazes them with attention, observing and studying each crack, each asperity, without being able to manage to escape from the fatal place and without knowing what exists outside these impassable limits.

We must study our fatal abode in all its details with the stubbornness and thoroughness of the blind.

We perceive the light, the heat, the various emanations which arrive from beyond the wall without ever managing to cross it.

It is the same in Astrology. We can set up an astronomical chariot, with all the desired precision, but the conclusions that we will draw from it will never give us complete satisfaction.

There is something there that escapes our calculation, something that seems to belong to another plane, requiring other processes than a simple figure and operations on the ecliptic.

This unknown—which is the essential—is found above the region of Knowledge: it belongs to the domain of Faith.

This is why the Sages of Antiquity considered Astrology as one of the sacred sciences closely linked to the cult; for this reason, they hid it under the veil of the Mystery.

It was not mathematical speculation that was to be taken away from the curiosity of the crowds, but rather that which went beyond the bounds of human knowledge, which touched the immutable laws of Nature emanating from the divine spiritual plane.

Our age of advanced materialism has moved away from religion; we make fun of its ritual which we consider ridiculous and useless, without suspecting to what extent it is indispensable.

The Christian ritual is only the heritage of a very ancient religion. It dates back to the earliest ages of mankind. The founders of this ritual knew how to combine the vibrations of the material plane to obtain the vibratory agreements of the higher planes.

The ritual was human, but the results it produced to obtain were of a supra-terrestrial order.

All branches of science were related to religion and depended in some way on the latter.

Finally, religion, when necessary, crossed the limits imposed on human knowledge to act on the fundamental laws of Nature with which it was in perfect harmony (i).

In publishing this book, it is not my intention to reveal what should remain hidden. Astrology is an occult science: it must remain such.

I have endeavored only to grasp the kinship of Astrology with the Ancient Wisdom of which some teachings, through the Kabbalah, have come down to us.

Whoever, having aptitudes for Initiation, will want to sincerely study this vital science and will know how to look beyond the blinders of official knowledge, will find here some directives suitable to help him in his ascent on the spiral which leads to the Absolute.

Notre époque de matérialisme avance nous éloigne de la religion ;
 mais nous ignorons de son côté que nous ignorons religieuse et inutile, sans soupçonner jusqu'à quel point il est indispensable.
 Le matérialisme n'est que l'effacement d'une religion très ancienne.
 Il remonte aux premiers âges de l'humanité. Les fondateurs de ce matérialisme combinent les vibrations du plan matériel pour obtenir les seconds vibrations des plans supérieurs.
 Le matérialisme était d'ordre humain, mais les résultats qu'il produisait d'obtenir étaient d'ordre supra-terrestre.
 Toutes les branches de la science étaient reliées à la religion et relivées en quelques sortes de cette dernière.
 Enfin, la religion, lorsqu'il se faisait, franchissait les bornes imposées au savoir de l'homme pour agir sur les lois fondamentales de la Nature avec lesquelles elle était en parfaite harmonie (1).
 Un poète ou un orateur, il n'est pas dans une intention de dévoiler ce qui doit rester caché. L'astrologie est une science occulte ; elle doit rester telle.
 Je me suis efforcé seulement de faire saisir la portée de l'astrologie avec la sagacité d'un philosophe expérimenté, à travers la Cabale, sont arrivés jusqu'à nous.
 C'est, par conséquent, à l'initiation, toutes études sacrées dans cette science vitale et sans cesse se renouvelant les méthodes de savoir officiel, trouvent les quelques directives propres à l'initier dans son attention sur la spirale qui mène à l'Absolu.

ASTRONOMIC ASTROLOGY

Chapter One

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

Astrology or science of the stars belongs to the field of the oldest sciences. It is difficult to say precisely where and when it was born, because traces of its existence can be found in the history and the known texts of the oldest civilizations.

The priests of Chaldea, Egypt, Persia and India studied the movements of the stars. According to their observations, they had instituted the division of time, a division which has survived to our day, and organized the life of the peoples whose guides they were.

Some of their conclusions have formed the basis of our current science which has limited itself to developing them. However, it is difficult for us to judge of the complete evolution of the ancient science by the only vestiges that have come down to us.

Be that as it may, it is almost certain that the founders of the religions and civilizations closest to our era, such as Moses, Pythagoras, Plato and others, had received Initiation in the temples of the Egypt, these centers of ancient Wisdom.

Behind the veil of the most severe esotericism, he who, morally soaked in hard trials, had been judged worthy, received the initiation into the mysteries of sacred science, preserved for centuries in the sanctuaries.

Man, this image of God, then possessed extensive knowledge that he forgot in the sequel after getting bogged down in matter.

In those remote times, the human Word possessed the real force of creation, for he was still in harmony with nature and he thus called into life the forces necessary to incarnate his thought.

We find in the old writings some data on this primitive language called Adamic or Wattan, totally forgotten by the man having lost the way indicated by his Creator.

"In the beginning (in principle) was the Word," says Saint John.

These same words had been spoken a few thousand years before him by the Creator of Egyptian Wisdom, Hermes-Tot, whom the Greeks called Trismegistos (thrice great).

“And the Word of God shook the Universe, and as it moved, the light radiated and appeared the infinite forms of Life. (i)

Thus Life is the Divine Word manifested.

The first man before original sin, that is to say before he plunged into matter and riveted to the chain of earthly passions, possessed the Divine gift of the Word which, like that of his prototype, the Creator of the Universe, had creative power. This is why Moses reports it in the book of Genesis: “And the Eternal God formed of the ground all the beasts of the field and all the birds of the heavens; and he called them to

(i) Hermes Trismegistos: Poimandres.

Adam, to see how he would name them, and that any name Adam gave to each living being would be his name". (Genesis II, 19).

After the original sin, man lost this divine gift because, engaged in the false path for which he had opted, he had used it for evil.

From that moment began his vain search for the Creator Word, a search that continues to this day through centuries and civilizations. But this Word remains inaccessible because man, in his investigations, approaches it from the bad side, that is to say from the material side.

The collapse of great civilizations, the confusion of languages, as well as other misfortunes, were the results of this harmful orientation.

The power of the Spirit belongs only to those who, along with it, have developed the perfection of the soul.

According to the teaching of the Ancients, man — Microcosm — is the prototype of the Universe — Macrocosm.

Just as man is made up of three elements: the body, the spirit and the soul which unites the first two, the Universe is also made up of the Spirit (God), the Body (the visible world) and of the soul (the universal man, Adam-Eve, humanity), whose mission is to transmit the laws of the Spirit-God to the world and to govern it.

This abstract idea of the trinity of the constitution of the Man-Universe and the reciprocal action of the elements composing this trinity was presented in an original way by Papus using a very simple figure (1).

It represents man as a harnessed car, driven by a coachman. The car symbolizes the body; the coachman, the spirit; the horse, the soul. The coachman directs the vehicle, makes it go, stop, thus transmitting his will to the car through the horse which drags it.

The same idea can also be translated by three circles which partially penetrate each other.

Each circle represents the corresponding elements of the microcosm and the macrocosm. It retains its independence while encroaching on neighboring circles.

This figure responds well to what we want to demonstrate.

Indeed, it is not possible to indicate where, in man, the phenomena of the spirit end and where those of the soul begin, any more than to fix the demarcation between the phenomena of the soul and those of the body.

It is the same in the Macrocosm with regard to the transition from the world of ideas to the world of forces, and from the latter to the world of manifested forces whose precise limits we cannot fix.

An important remark is essential above all: the law of the Trinity is at the base of the Universe. This law of the Trinity in Unity is the essential formula on which rests all the life of the Cosmos. "The number three reigns everywhere in the Universe and Unity is its beginning (principle)" (2), says Zarathustra.

This law has come to us through all religions based on the Trinity of one God.

The prehistoric cult of the sun, moon and earth developed among the Hindus in that of Brahma, Vischnu and Shiva. Among the Egyptians

(1) Papus: Elementary Treatise on Practical Magic.

(2) Beginning or principle is taken in the same sense as Saint John in his Gospel I: "En arché".

like: Osiris, Ra, Phta. Finally, among Christians: God the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit. These various names correspond in the teaching of Hermès-Tot to the "Principle, Word, Life" or the Incarnate Divine Word (i).

The Kabbalah, or oral tradition, which has come down to us from the Hebrew texts, but whose origin is lost in the mists of time, represents the occult teaching of the Shrines of Ancient Egypt, transmitted by Moses to the Hebrew High Priests.

The Kabbalah emits this formula of the ternary in the explanation of the occult construction of the alphabet whose base is constituted by three letters: Aleph which corresponds to the divine world; Mem, to the physical world; and S chin, to the spiritual world.

In the lower plane, the same letters correspond to the three main elements of the Universe: air, water and fire. "Three mothers: aleph, mem, schin" (2).

Thus the first law of the Universe is that of the Trinity which carries within itself the second law, that of balance: "Three mothers: Aleph, Mem, Schin, their fundamental trait: the cup of justice, the cut of guilt and the law that fixes the balance between them" (3).

From these two laws derive the following two laws: the law of the Septenary and the law of the Duodenary.

Seven is formed by two ternaries which, each considered as a single unit, one positive, the other negative, are balanced by the unit placed between them.

"Sevens, three against three and one sets the balance between them. » (4)

This constitutes the third fundamental law, that of the universal scale which appears in all creation (seven planets, seven colors, seven notes, seven days of the week, etc...).

"Seven and not six, seven and not eight. Scrutinize them, lay the thing down like you have to and put the Creator in his place", says the Sepher Ietzirah (5).

Finally, the law of twelve (duodenal) consists of four ternaries placed at the four cardinal points of the astrological cross (East, West, North, South).

As we see, the total of these laws gives the number 22 (3 -f- 7 -f- 12) which represents the number of letters of the sacred alphabet established in correspondence with the great laws of the Universe.

Another combination, 3 + 7, forms the basis of our numeration; the Sephiroth of the Kabbalah: "The ten numbers, twenty-two letters and four astronomical signs of the times make up the range and conclusion of the Kabbalah. It is simple as child's play and complicated as the most difficult problem" (6).

For the moment, I will not go any further, proposing to come back to these symbolic considerations, barely touched upon here, in order to lay down the fundamental principles on which Astrology is based.

First, I will quote some very profound words from Fabre d'Olivet:

"Moses followed in his exposition the method of the Egyptian priests who

(1) The idea is the Father, the Word is his Son. They are indissolubly linked in Eternity and their union is Life. — Hermes Trismegistus: Poimandres.

(2) Sepher Ietzirah, III, 1.

had three ways of expressing their thoughts. The first was clear and simple, the second symbolic and figurative, the third sacred or hieroglyphic. They used, for this purpose, three kinds of characters, but not three dialects, as one might think. The same word took on its own literal, figurative or hieroglyphic meaning. Such was the genius of their language. Heraclitus perfectly expressed the difference of these three styles, designating them by the epithets of speaking, signifying and hiding. The first two manners, that is to say those which consisted in taking the words in their proper or figurative sense, were oratorical; but the third, which could receive its hieroglyphic form only by means of the characters of which the words were composed, existed only for the eyes, and was used only while writing" (1).

The above indicates that the translation of Genesis which has come down to us (translation of the first meaning) cannot be considered as it should be, that is, as the most precious study capable of unveiling to the man all the mysteries of creation accessible to his understanding.

Back to Astrology.

The universal range consists of the seven planets, namely: the Sun, Venus, Mercury, the Moon, Saturn, Jupiter and Mars.

The fact that man has discovered a few other planets does not alter the architectural harmony of Astrology. These last planets are placed beyond the margins of the fundamental scale as the ultraviolet and the infrared range beyond the range of the spectrum, as the notes of the higher scales form octaves with those of the scale main.

Here is how Hermes-Tot, describing the vision he had had, derives the law of the universal range from the law of the Trinity: "The Thought and the Divine Word create the manifestation of Omnipotence. From this Omnipotence emanate seven spirits who work in seven circles and in these circles are enclosed all the beings who dwell in the world.

The manifestation of the seven spirits in these circles is called Destiny. These circles themselves are enclosed in the Divine Thought which penetrates them at all times" (2).

This incomparable teaching shows us God invisible, eternal, Almighty, on an infinite height, incomprehensible to our weak reasoning and, under him, the seven geniuses holders of his will, executors of Destiny.

This teaching is the basis of all Astrology, a sacred and doubly occult science.

The Holy Scriptures teach us of the existence of angels, spirits in high places, intermediaries between God and man, who appeared on earth on various occasions as messengers responsible for transmitting the Divine Will to man.

The sages of antiquity asserted that God governed the lives of men through these superior spirits. They sought and found the proofs of it in the visible phenomena of nature.

The circle of the Zodiac was an open book to them where they read the image of predestination and the indications of Destiny represented by the flaming letters of the stars.

(1) Fabre d'Olivet: Hebrew language restored, II, 24.

(2) Hermès Trismégistos: Poimandres.

The twelve signs of the Zodiac are the twelve frontiers of the Universe according to the "Sepher Bereschit."

These signs imagined by the Sages and adopted by astronomy are arranged on a circle whose plane intersects the terrestrial equator at the two equinoctial points, and which is divided into twelve equal parts corresponding to the twelve zodiacal constellations.

In this circle move the seven planets passing from one sign to another and, for this reason, named by the Ancients: wandering stars, in contrast to the constellations of the Zodiac which are fixed.

It is in this zone that lives, according to tradition, the Soul of the World for to reign according to the Divine Will over all the manifestations of Life.

As I explained above, there are seven superior spirits who transmit the will of the Creator and govern all the vital phenomena observed in the visible world. Their names are: Michaël, Anaël, Raphaël, Gabriel, Cassiel, Sahiel and Samaël. Each of these entities radiates in Life emanations that are specific to it. The seven planets of the universal scale are their visible signs because each of them is attached to one of these Spirits.

Thus, according to astrological doctrine, such and such a configuration of planets in the zodiacal circle is a reflection of a similar configuration of the spiritual influences which govern these planets.

To realize this datum, it is therefore necessary, above all, to establish the celestial map of a moment envisaged, a map which will be the visible reflection of the combined influences of the Spirits.

This first operation, which consists in determining the longitudes planets, is done by astronomical calculations.

This precise representation of the sky at a given moment, allowing the different influences of the Spirits to be deciphered at this same moment, is called a horoscope.

A horoscope can be calculated either at the time of a human being's birth or at the beginning of any event.

,$A horoscope drawn for a given moment in a man's life or of a people is called Revolution.

When the astronomical position of the stars at the desired time is determined and the chart of the horoscope is drawn up, one proceeds to a second operation, which consists of cabbalistic calculations giving finally fateful numbers. These determine the individual and make understood the combinations of planetary influences on the subject to which the horoscope applies.

We say "planetary influences" to simplify; for by this must be understood the influences of the spirits of which the planets are only the visible forces. If this latter work were not carried out, the horoscope would be incomplete, for it would give only certain combinations of influences for a definite moment, but not for a definite person. Such a horoscope would correspond to a certain type of man born under a certain configuration, but it could not relate to the personality in question.

The second operation individualizes the horoscope, the result of celestial influences concentrating on a determined being. In other words: a certain man born in a determined environment with innate qualities and defects comprising such a future, a natural consequence of the preceding elements, could not be born at another moment than that at which he was born to be as he is. .

Finally the third and last operation is the reading of the horoscope, that is to say the means of deciphering and interpreting it.

This is achieved by studying the combinations of astral and cabbalistic influences of the theme. There are special tables to facilitate the deciphering of astral influences, but I must say that in order to be able to read a horoscope without neglecting the smallest details which sometimes completely change its meaning, it is essential to first have a long practice and second, intuition.

Everyone can build a theme, everyone can read it, but... for many it will only be a barely sketched work and minute details, whose importance is capital, will often go unnoticed.

I add, important remark, that Astrology does not teach that destiny is imminent and ineluctable, because we would then fall into fatalism and man would be considered only as a wheel in the universal machine - which does not 'is not.

On the contrary, Astrology defines with great precision the type, the character of man and the tendencies which will lead him to such and such events. She indicates to him the trials he will have to undergo in the course of life, trials which will mold his mind and forge his will; it represents in a way the bed in which his existence must flow but which he can leave by an effort of his free will to avoid a misfortune or a fault which threatens him. Hence the usefulness of the study of Astrology because, having the idea of his future, man can deflect the blows of fate or, at the very least, prepare himself to receive them.

"He is a scientist who can turn away many stars when he knows them, and prepare himself before their event. (Ptolemy's speech to the centi, app. V).

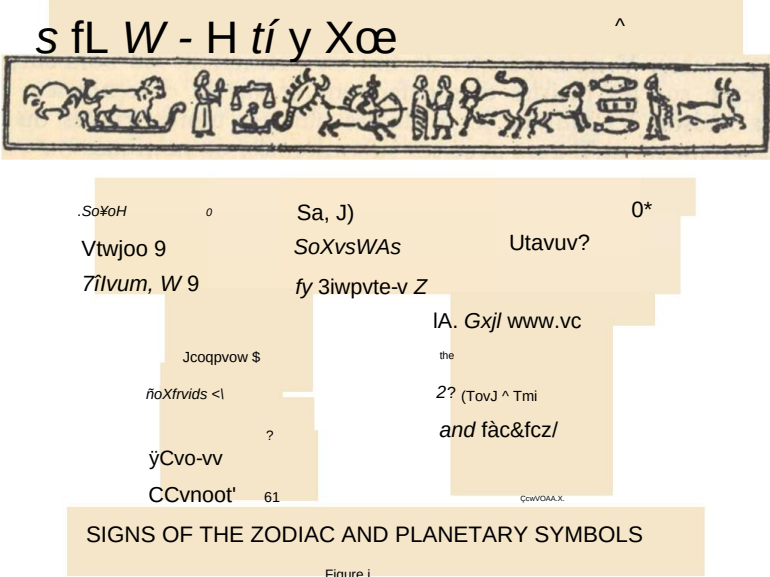

Chapter II

SOLAR HOUSES

We have seen in the preceding chapter that the theme of the horoscope is an exposition of signs and numbers which, in their combinations, correspond to the mysterious emanations of the governing forces of the life of the Universe and of man in particular.

These signs, interpreted according to the methods of the ancient sages, make it possible to foresee, from the moment of man's birth, the trials, perils and successes which await him during his existence. To represent the signs of the Zodiac, the Ancients imagined conventional signs, which are used in contemporary astronomy (Fig. i.)

The Planets are represented on the same figure.

These signs symbolize the ideas to which they correspond.

To draw up the horoscopic chart the astrologers traced a circle which they divided into twelve equal parts of 30° each. These are the solar houses.

This fundamental circle is oriented so that East is on the left, North on the bottom, West on the right and South on the top of the figure.

These four points are called: Cardinal points of the horoscope.

The houses are laid out so that the I is in the East and the following ones in the counter-clockwise direction. (See figure 2).

The circle of solar houses is fixed.

The houses which are on the cardinal points, i.e. I, IV, VII and X are called cardinal houses. House X which is at the zenith is the highest point of the chart, Midheaven or MC; while the house IV which is opposed to it is the Bottom of the Sky or FC. The zodiacal circle moves concentrically in the fixed circle of the solar houses and the signs pass successively from one house to the next. If the sign of Aries is in the first house, the seventh house is occupied by the sign of Libra and so on. The sign that occupies house I—the one that rises on the horizon (diameter EO) at the moment of birth—is given the designation of rising sign (As) (figure 2).

Houses II, V, VIII and XI are named successive and houses III, VI, IX, XII, cadentes.

Each house has a meaning of its own and whose coloration depends on the sign that occupies it and the planets that are there.

House I provides information on the duration of the life of the subject, on his temperament, his intellectual faculties.

House II indicates his state of material prosperity, the goods he can earn or acquire.

House III establishes his relationship with his close relatives (brothers, sisters) and mentions the short trips he is called upon to undertake.

House IV — cardinal point N — relates to its ascendants and to all that is hidden, ignored, as well as to his real estate.

House V allows us to read the predictions of happiness, we documents on the pleasures and satisfactions and on the descendants.

House VI indicates the more or less serious illnesses of the subject, the inconveniences he will have with his subordinates, servants or neighbors, according to his social rank.

House VII - cardinal point - fixes on liaisons of all kinds, marriage in particular, and also on their antipodes: quarrels, hatreds, wars.

House VIII indicates the kind of death of the subject, the inheritances or gifts to be received.

House IX concerns religious matters and long journeys on land or at sea.

House X, the culmination of the S theme, sheds light on the happy or unhappy destiny of the subject, the position, the successes or the honors that await him. This house also heralds the rise and fall.

The XI house is related to friendships and protections.

Finally, the XII house defines the great misfortunes of existence: for consequences, prison, capture, exile, etc... It also indicates the hidden enemies and their machinations.

According to the above we can divide the solar houses into houses happy, average and unhappy.

Houses I, II, VII and X are usually happy.

Houses III, IV, IX, XI, middle. House V contains the possibilities of happiness. On the contrary, the sixth house is a receptacle of misfortunes.

Finally, the VIII and XII houses are clearly unhappy.

At first glance, it seems incomprehensible that one can give the preceding meanings to the houses, as well as the order in which they follow each other. For example, why does house VIII give indications on the death of the subject, when it would have been more logical to attribute them to house XII, end of the chart? But by studying more attentively the architecture of astrological theory, we understand the strictly logical constructive order on which it is based.

The twelve solar houses are arranged at the twelve points of a star inscribed in the circle and formed by 4 triangles. The vertices of each of these triangles occupy a cardinal point of the theme (fig. 2).

These triangles symbolize the ternary repeated four times, that is to say the fundamental law of the divine Trinity manifested in the quaternary of the visible world. This is what is called in astrology the four trines derived from the Trinity (whose unity is repeated). The sacred four-letter name is its symbol.

The passage (the transition) is the union of the Creator (Trinity) with the created (quaternary).

I also propose to come back to this question in due course.

Human life can be divided into four phases: childhood, youth, middle age and old age.

Each of these phases contains in itself three elements: 1, the reception, 20 the manifestation of what has been received, 30 the result of this manifestation which determines such and such circumstances or creates certain relations between the subject and his fellows. The Ancients depicted in each of these triangles one of the phases of life with its causes, manifestations and effects. The twelve houses thus comprised the whole existence of man in its gradual development (1).

From birth, the individual first develops like any other being according to the physiological laws of his species. It is for this reason that the aptitudes, qualities and innate defects are indicated in the house I. — Summit of the triangle E (East).

As the child grows and develops physically, the nature of his soul begins to manifest. The parents give him or not the first religious notions.

But everything that lives, being from God, must undergo a physical and spiritual evolution to complete the cycle of its course in order to reintegrate itself into its Creator.

This race of the soul is symbolically represented by the earthly journeys of incarnated man, which allow him to enlarge his horizons and develop his initiative. We therefore understand the reason for the meeting in the 9th house of religious questions and travel. This house is placed at the top of the second angle of the triangle considered above.

(x) The following has been composed according to various authors.

Having fixed in life his physical and spiritual characteristics, man exercises his thought and prolongs his family to fulfill the order of the Creator who said according to Genesis: "Increase and multiply".

This representation is carried out in the house V which ends the first trine (3rd angle). (See Fig. 2).

Having reached the full development of his innate abilities, man strives to occupy a social position corresponding to his birth. Will he be happy or unhappy? Will he become famous or will he remain in the shadows? Will he rise or will he lose what he had at the start? All these eventualities are locked in the hands of Fate.

He can influence or modify the latter to a greater or lesser extent according to the spiritual development he has acquired in the first phase of his existence.

This social position, the result of his development during his family life, is indicated in the X house (summit of the second triangle).

In house VI (second angle), we find information on the place that man will occupy in life. We will see if he can rise above his peers or fall lower, if he has to struggle for existence and suffer certain bodily diseases.

House II which ends the second triangle provides information on the property future being of the subject or on his misery.

Pursuing his complete development, the man must affirm his relations with his fellow men and manifest his sexual instincts which must inevitably lead him to marriage. These manifestations of relationship life can be beneficial or detrimental to him. House VII will provide information on all of the above. (Summit of the 3rd triangle).

After realizing his family ties and the associations required by his situation, he becomes attached by solid ties to his closest relatives, brothers and sisters. Indication given to us by house III which occupies the 2nd angle of the 3rd triangle. But, as this house is opposite the 9th there we find information on trips of little importance and small departures from normal life.

The feeling that follows that resulting from blood ties belongs to the domain of friendship. To achieve an honorable position, reliable friends and protectors are indicated. They are especially essential in the difficult moments of life. Will the subject find true friends in times of misfortune and powerful protectors to lift him above the crowd? The answer to these questions will be read in the 9th house which ends the 3rd triangle.

Although at first glance the life of man may seem happy, it always involves painful moments, trials, disappointments, sorrows and sometimes loss of fortune and position. This is also one of the consequences of physical and moral heredity. Often this heredity plays a decisive role throughout life. House IV — cardinal point N — which is at the apex of the 4th triangle, gives us indications on this subject. Moreover, this house contains the secret and unexpected things concerning the subject as well as the indications suitable for developing its judgment.

House XII highlights the misfortunes that can befall the happiest man in appearance.

Finally, the death that ends our earthly journey is marked in the house VIII which closes the 4th triangle.

This is the circle in which the seven stars move, torches visible from the seven spirits of the vision of Hermes-Tot.

Let's remember these important numbers: 3, 4, 12, 7.

The Divine ternary multiplied by the incarnate quaternary gives the twelve signs of the Zodiac. The ternary added to the quaternary gives the number 7, number of the universal scale.

According to the teaching of one of the Fathers of the Church, Saint Denis l'Aéropagite (1), versed in Astrology, the angels or high spirits have the mission of protecting man and helping him in his evolution towards good.

Thus the angels who rule the first house strive to destroy evil and to attract good to the road of human life. Those of the 2nd house diminish the effect of the seductions which assail the man. Those of the 3rd house help him in his struggle with the visible elements. Those of the 4th carry our prayers and our good works before the altar of the Almighty. Those of the 5th open the way to Purification for us. Those of the 6th illuminate our intelligence. Those of the 7th reveal to us in a dream what is likely to elevate our soul! Those of the 8th turn us away from sin which "kills our spiritual principle in our hearts." Those of the 9th make us seek our only salvation in God. Those of the 10th console us in misfortune and support us in adversity. Those of the 11th lessen our trials when they see us exhausted. Finally, those of the 12th awaken our conscience when we have committed some fault.

According to this conception, we are surrounded by higher beings who support us during our journey, protect us in danger, direct us to the true path of progress.

It seems extraordinary that with such powerful assistance man may fall into the abyss of evil. But we must not forget the formidable power of earthly instincts, the Na-hash of Genesis which draws him to sin:

The balance between mind and body is lost, the body finally dominates and, it takes a serious effort of will to redress the balance.

He who seeks light and truth receives fruitful assistance from heavenly forces on the steep path that leads him to progress. He who prefers darkness forges himself an unfortunate destiny which will crush him with his weight in this life and in the hereafter. %

Chapter III

ZODIAC SIGNS

As we have seen, the circle of the Zodiac, with its twelve signs, symbolizes the manifestation of the Divine Trinity in the visible world limited by the four points of the astrological cross.

The signs of the Zodiac are grouped into four ternaries which govern the four elements of Nature: air, water, fire and earth. These four zodiacal ternaries are called in Astrology: trines.

The air trine is formed by the signs: Gemini, Libra, Aquarius; that of water by Cancer, Scorpio, Pisces; that of fire by Aries, Leo, Sagittarius; that of the earth by Taurus, Virgo, Capricorn.

The signs of the Zodiac which belong to the same trine have similar qualities and are typical of the corresponding nature. These qualities radiate and act on the lower world and on the character of man in particular.

The Ancients considered the signs of the Zodiac as hieroglyphs in which they deciphered the combinations of the influences of the high Spirits who reigned over them.

In the following table, I have listed:

1° the spirits dominating the zodiacal signs of the Egyptian and Greco-Roman religions;

2° the twelve symbolic families of Israel represented by the twelve mysterious stones of the Ephod of the High Priest of Jerusalem (Exodus 28) (Plate I).

Whoever wants to study Astrology according to the writings of the tradition will encounter different specifications adopted by the Ancients concerning the signs of the Zodiac and their combinations.

Here they are :

Spring signs: Aries, Taurus, Gemini.

Signs of winter: Capricorn, Aquarius, Pisces.

Autumn signs: Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius.

Signs of summer: Cancer, Leo, Virgo.
Equinoxial signs: Aries, Libra.
Solstice signs: Cancer, Capricorn.
Northern signs: Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer, Leo, Virgo.
Southern signs: Libra, Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn, Aquarius, Pisces.
Fixed signs: Taurus, Leo, Scorpio, Aquarius.
Dual signs: Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius, Pisces (i).
Male signs: Aries, Gemini, Leo, Libra, Sagittarius, Aquarius.
Feminine signs: Taurus, Cancer, Virgo, Scorpio, Capricorn, Pisces.

The Beasts: Aries, Taurus, Leo, as well as the posterior part (3rd decan) of Sagittarius and Capricorn (i). Creepers: Cancer, Scorpio, Pisces. Humans: Gemini, Virgo, Libra, as well as the front part of Sagittarius and Aquarius (1st decan). Quadrupeds: Aries, Taurus, Leo, Sagittarius, Capricorn. Royals: Aries, Leo, Sagittarius. Violent: Aries, Libra, Scorpio, Capricorn, Aquarius.

(i) This is self-explanatory if one observes the signs as the Egyptians represented them.

Remark. — In this table, the Hebrew correspondences are taken ises se;

Dangerous: Gemini, Libra, Aquarius, especially if they are on one of the cardinal points. Passionate: Aries, Taurus, Leo, Scorpio, Capri horn. The sign of Taurus provokes stubbornness and perseverance. If the signs of Capricorn and Aquarius are in the house, the influence of the spirits that dominates them increases.

These most usual conventions exposed, it seems to me useful to present in a table the influence of the 36 spirits which govern the 36 decans according to the teaching of the Ancients and which constitute a kind of link between the spirits of the Zodiac and those of the planets. (Plate II).

The influences of the decans on man are not absolute. They give certain directives which can be developed or modified by the combined action of the different planets in the horoscopic chart.

It is useful to note the natural connections of the influences of the planetary geniuses with those of the decans, connections forming a basis on which the capricious combinations of the planets will embroider the complicated design of the curriculum vitae. Graphically, these combinations are shown in Figure 2.

Chapter IV

PLANETS

“Seven planets in the world: Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury and the Moon (1). Seven days in time, seven days in the week, seven openings in the body of man and woman” (2). Seven colors of the rainbow, seven notes of the scale, etc...

The number seven is the fundamental number of Divine manifestation in the world. “Seven and not six, seven and not eight”. Keep these rules in mind, because this universal law is the basis of Astrology with all its subsequent developments and adaptations. This universal range divides the entire visible Universe into seven faces as well as all the manifestations accessible to our embodied intelligence.

The scale of seven is the essential principle on which is based the table of correspondences which, penetrating into the darkest depths of inanimate nature, goes on rising through all the phases of life to the heights accessible to our intelligence. There shine on the crown with seven faces the names of the superior spirits of the planets, executors in the Universe of the Destiny decreed by God.

The physical and spiritual man, with his faults, his illnesses, his weaknesses, his tendencies, is also subject to this fundamental law whose knowledge and adaptation help him to settle in harmony with the Universe.

The health of the body, the balance of the soul, the happiness of man depend on the understanding of this universal harmony. It gives him the ability to harmonize his being with Nature. The man who has the feeling of beauty — the visible manifestation of harmony — draws closer to his luminous source: Truth, the essence of beauty and harmony. He has already attained the greatest happiness, happiness which is the goal of his earthly existence and the crowning of his efforts.

The previous table is the diagram of the universal range. The elements which compose it are borrowed from numerous works and especially from the Kabbalah. (Plate III).

We have included in this table only a few examples of each kind of manifestation of the life of the Universe. The reader wishing to study this question closely will have to consult various works of magic or occult sciences where he will find indications on the correspondences in nature (i). I do not know if there is a book dealing with this important question. On plants, read an excellent work by Sédir: Magic Plants, in which he systematizes plants according to the planets that govern them and gives interesting rules of adaptation in accordance with the laws of universal harmony.

As was said above, man is composed of three elements: spirit, soul and body. Although of different natures, these last elements are indissolubly united to manifest the being crowning creation: man. Each part composing this incarnated ternary lives its own life according to certain laws which react to the plane to which it belongs.

Man with his earthly intelligence can only conceive and study laws governing the lower material plane to which his body belongs. Sometimes he can still suspect some law of the plane to which his soul belongs, the astral plane. But he knows nothing and cannot understand the laws of the highest plane, the spiritual plane to which his spirit belongs. It is the sacred domain of religion. We believe without being able to verify anything. Sometimes, however, we perceive manifestations of this higher plane reflected in matter, manifestations which are for us the most precious indications.

Thus, as I said in the first chapter, Astrology, by studying the movements and combinations of the visible stars, brings to light the oracles of elevated spirits, demonstrates their influence on the lower plane, that of reflections and incarnations.

The planetary influences are manifested on the character of man, on his individuality as well as on his exterior, the manifestation of the inner man in the embodied world.

The influences of the spirits put like an imprint on the material envelope of man, to such an extent that it is often possible to judge from them to which type of astral influence he belongs, in other words to which note of the universal scale corresponds to its resonance.

Observational sciences, physiognomy, phrenology and palmistry are based on this consideration.

Later I will give some of the characteristic features distinguishing the planetary types. But it is especially important to note that man receiving at birth a bundle of influences emanating from several planets, it is very rare to encounter a pure planetary type. However, by carefully observing the exterior of a subject, one can determine the signs that relate it to one of the known types.

I know of several cases where this examination has made it possible to find out with some precision the main events in the life of the person in question and to define his character.
