

MISSING PERSON LOCATION TECHNIQUE !

The following information is a very simple technique for finding missing children, adults, MIA's, etc.. Please take it SERIOUSLY.

Make a 90-degree "Angle Wire" by bending an 18" length of 1/8" iron welding rod at right angles at the center and slipping it into a 7" length of 1/4" straight copper tubing. Both ends of the rod should be pointed, and the top end of the tube should be smooth and flat so the wire can turn freely inside the tube.

Wrap the four fingers of your RIGHT hand around the copper tube, and place the front of the thumb against the side of the tube near the top so that the center of the whorl of your thumb is pressed against the tube. Stand on solid ground with your feet about one foot apart, and hold the Angle Wire so the copper tube is vertical, about 15 inches in front of your chest.

Place the center of the whorl of your LEFT index finger against a "specimen" of the missing person while thinking about him or her. (A "specimen" is the image of the person in a polaroid photograph, a photographic negative, or a print having an existing negative; a spot of blood on a piece of paper, a hair, or possibly even an original signature, of the person.)

The Angle Wire will then turn to point in the direction of the missing person (if he or she is still alive, at least). Repeat this procedure while facing in different directions.

The person can then be found by going in the direction that the wire is consistently pointing toward, or by moving some distance at right angles to that direction and finding the new direction (triangulation method).

Many people are not likely to be successful with this technique, especially people who have received x-rays. Those who have demonstrated success at "water witching" or "MAP DOWSING" are most likely to be successful at this. However, each person involved in looking for missing persons should TRY IT. Practice by "locating" people who are NOT missing.

This technique should be used to find missing children, kidnap victims, MIA's, or lost pets. It should NOT be MIS-used to track down tax evaders, absent fathers, draft dodgers, or other innocent people trying to avoid legalized extortion, armed robbery, and slavery.

This technique was developed by a Canadian scientist, Frances Nixon, of The Vivaxis Energies Research International Society, 211 Blackman St., New Westminster, British Columbia V3L 2A8, Canada. Contact THEM for more information.
