WOOD CHART

Classic graphic for use in psionic medicine. The original graph by W. O. Wood, which was essentially a graphic for generic research in dowsing was adopted by Dr. George Lawrence in his psionic medicine. This is a better version elaborated graphically and aesthetically. This chart enables the therapist to research the disease and the most appropriate remedies to treat it.

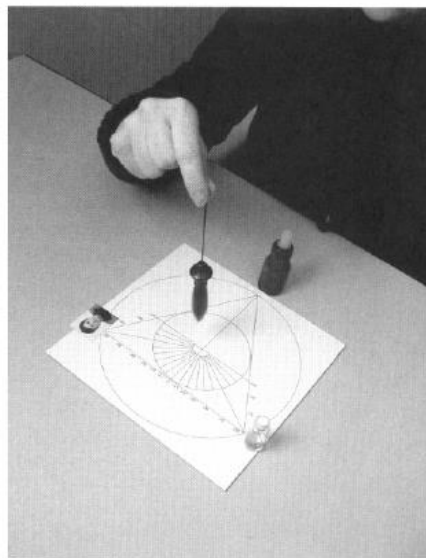

Place the chart on your workbench, point 0 aligned to the North. The dowser to the south, facing the lower vertex of the triangle. The client's witness will be placed outside the circle at the right vertex of the triangle. On the opposite side in the left vertex will be the Turenne rates of the disease or organ of artificial organs or diseases produced by the method of the French dowser Louis Turenne. The pendulum laid on the north-south axis shall have a marked deviation to the right or left, when the Turenne rate corresponding to the disease is placed at the apex corresponding.

Proceed with the selection of the medicine by placing one by one at the bottom vertex. The remedy that results in a greater correction of the pendulum on the north-south line will be the remedy indicated for the case under study.

Experienced dowsers may substitute Turenne rates, hard to find, by equivalents created from lexical witnesses valorized in the decagon.
